

Gang Robs

on an all-mail train, or traveling post office, in the 125 years of their history in Britain.

First, the robbers jumped the signalman on that section of the line and set the block signals at "danger," bringing the mail train to a halt three miles from Leighton Buzzard.

When the fireman, David Whitby, 26, climbed down from the cab of the diesel engine to investigate, he was attacked and overcome by two of the bandits.

The engineer, Jack Mills, 35, then was seized.

The robbers swiftly and expertly uncoupled the engine and first two mail cars, and forced Mills at gunpoint to drive them a mile down the track to where their compatriots were waiting.

There, Whitby and Mills were handcuffed together. The bandits, their faces covered with silk stockings and blackjacks. They quickly broke open the doors of the sealed mail cars and subdued the four postal employees working inside.

Then the gang grabbed the 120 sacks of mail, which were believed to include old bank notes on their way to being destroyed and diamonds destined for London jewel markets.

With the loot loaded aboard the trucks and the passenger car, the bandits scattered before the robbery was discovered by the engineer of another train passing in the opposite direction.

Police promptly threw up roadblocks over a wide area.
