WHISPERING - At least two whispers have started on the two leading gubernatorial candidates for the Democratic Party. There will be others, of course, but these two side-of-the-mouth statements are built-in political thunder, so look out for them.

1. Dan Moore is the tool of big business. His main source of income has been from the great Champion Paper Co. as their counsel. Look for this from those most adept at using such things among the outer fringes of the Fryer following.

2. One of the signers of a petition asking Presidential clemency for Junius Scales of Greensboro, former Carolina director of the Communist Party, was Richardson Fryer. (This is already making the rounds.)

What the whisperers don't say, of course, is that an attorney's feelings are not necessarily colored by the type of client he represents. Sometimes the reverse is the case. And, on the other hand, young Scales renounced Communism while

SCOTT STEP - The real reason young Robert Scott is stepping down as master of the State Grange at its annual meeting in Statesville this week is that quite a bit of the activity he has planned for himself during the next eight months could pull the Grange organization deeply into politics.

Scott will take to the husking for Gubernatorial Candidate Richardson Fryer, oppose Agriculture Commissioner L. Y. (Stag) Ballentine, or both. The rumor is he will go all-out for Fryer, possibly on the payroll of the campaign, and will leave the Ballentine matter until a later date.

In any event, he did the fair thing in resigning from the Grange. Organizations, including the Grange itself, are sometimes used to further a cause or candidate close to the heart of the leaders. Such activity weakens the organization.

BIGGEST AND BEST - Those of you who missed the State Fair this year (about one-fifth of the State's population saw it, breathed it, felt it, smelled it) failed to participate in the finest thing of its kind ever held in North Carolina. We wouldn't take a thing away from the late Dr. J. S. Dorton, who laid the solid foundation of the State Fair in the better-than-two-decades he managed it, but the progress it has shown with Agriculture Commissioner Ballentine as "acting manager" has been tremendous. This is his second year with it.

Much of the credit, we suppose, must go to Publicity Director DeWitt editor, who seems to be right in aid Ooze, former weekly newspaper the middle of the show for much of the entire year.

The Fair this year was so big that we went, spent five hours rambling, found later we had missed an entire section of it, and proceeded to go back for a second round. It was big, educational, corny, exciting, thoroughly integrated, and expensive. However, you could get a fair-sized five-hour glimpse of North Carolina at its best on an outlay of less than two dollars. We did it - thesecond time around.
