Mary Tyler Moore, a canyon dweller, found a rattlesnake wrapped around her Emmy Award on the mantel. She's moving out of the Canyon to a hilltop home.

Bob Fuller finally came back to work in WAGON TRAIN, having walked off the show six weeks ago because his leading ladies weren't important enough to match his own starring image. The lure was the leading lady for the segment they're shooting this week: Tuesday Welds.

Bob Hope gets two leading ladies, Rhonda Fleming and Jill St. John, for his next Hope - Chrysler Theatre episode, "Have Girls' Will Travel".

Jack Benny will play a cameo in this same episode. No, he won't play a "cameo" - he'll play his fiddle at a square dance, and may not even speak a line.

Speaking of images, Mitzi Gaynor's agent decided "Dignified" is the word for Mitzi from now on and added a rider to all her nightclub contracts: "No sexy photos in the lobby."

A fan took so long getting Vince Edward's autograph at the Hollywood race track, Vince did not make it to the $50 window to place that $400 bet - on a loser. Moral: It pays to Be Polite to Your Fans.

Robert Reed, co-star of THE DEFENDERS, recalls a time when he was an unknown actor and a producer turned him down for a Western series with the explanation, "You're just not the type to play a cowboy". All of this was interesting to Reed, who was raised on ranches and learned to ride when he was three.

Among contestants on WHAT'S MY LINE, have been a pretzel bender, a worm raiser, a sausage stuffer and a maker of false teeth for cows.

Comedienne Cara Williams, who portrayed the wacky but lovable wife on the popular PETE AND GLADYS series, returns to television in THE CARA WILLIAM SHOW debuting this fall.
