Honeymoon Interrupted

Dr. Sam Sheppard Flies Back To Court

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard flew home to Ohio today, carried his new bride over the threshold of their home, and headed for a special federal court session to learn if he returns to prison as a wife slayer or continues his honeymoon.

Sheppard with his German pen pal bride of five days arrived at the Cleveland airport shortly after 9 a.m. EDT on a flight from New York.

They planned to go from Cleveland to Akron, an hour's drive away, in early afternoon for the scheduled 2 p.m. EDT hearing in court.

He immediately took his bride to her newly rented apartment in Rocky River, a swank Cleveland suburb.

Sit On Love Seat
Sheppard carried the 35 year old German born bride into the apartment and looked around for a few minutes before he admitted a newsman. The couple sat apart at first but soon sat together on a love seat, where Sheppard said life was "heaven all over again."

Marine Sent Back To Camp

Quite A Party

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Marine Pvt. Daniel Chidester was en route back to Camp Lejeune, N. C., today with a warning to mend his ways — and his parents' $10,000 rug.

Chidester was arrested Sunday and charged with keeping a disorderly house after neighbors complained that a continuous, three day party had spilled onto the street near his parents' $75,000 home.

The charges were dismissed by Judge Ralph H. Smith, who ordered Chidester to return to camp at once.

"You must leave immediately," Smith said. Chidester, 19, was not scheduled to end his furlough until Friday.

Police said the party had been attended by 200 to 300 persons who left the house a mess. They said countless bottles and watermelon rind were scattered all over the premises and the $10,000 rug had numerous burns and stains. Damage to the house was estimated at $4,000 to $5,000.

Chidester's mother and stepfather are vacationing in Europe.

Racial Strife Spreads To Brooklyn Area

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police fought young Negroes in the streets and critically wounded a suspect looter in a racially troubled Brooklyn neighborhood early today when violence, spawned in Harlem, flared on a second front.

On the fourth straight night of disorders in the nation's largest city, the focus switched from Harlem to Brooklyn's predominantly Negro Bedford Stuyvesant district where 200 helmeted riot police, firing in the air and swinging nightsticks, battled hundreds of roving youths Tuesday night and early today.

President Johnson announced Tuesday that he was ordering federal agents into Harlem to investigate the situation. He said citizens "have a right to protection of life and limb" whether in the rural South or on a big city street. The announcement coincided with reports that Communists and other extremists were taking a hand in inciting the trouble.

Schedules TV Address
Mayor Robert F. Wagner, who rushed home from a vacation in Spain Tuesday to take personal command during the city's crisis, scheduled a city wide television address tonight to discuss the ferment.

The Brooklyn shooting occurred during a series of stealthy lootings which continued almost until dawn in contrast to the riotous street-fighting earlier in the night. The victim, Harry Britton, 36, was wounded in the side when about a half dozen police opened fire on a group of suspects they were pursuing.

More than 10 persons, three of them police, were injured in the street disorders which began when police attempted to break up bands of Negroes who had broken windows and attempted to loot 30 or more business places.

Harlem Quiet
Police arrested a teen aged boy who was carrying about 150 mimeographed circulars explaining how to make "Molotov cocktails," make shift fire bombs fashioned from gasoline filled bottles. The pamphlet read: "Bulletin No. 1, July 1964. Harlem freedom fighters: How to make a Molotov cocktail. . . The youth said he obtained the leaflets "from a stranger."

Angier Man Gets Year For Liquor

For Demonstrations, Atmosphere of Lawlessness

UNC Professors Are Blamed

BURLINGTON — District Superior Court Solicitor T. D. Cooper Jr., says he believes a minority of professors at the University of North Carolina is responsible for an attitude of disrespect for the law at Chapel Hill.

Cooper is solicitor for District 10-A and prosecuted several hundred criminal cases arising from civil rights demonstrations in Chapel Hill last winter. Other cases resulting from the demonstrations remain to be tried.

"It would be unethical for me to say anything about cases yet to be tried," he said in prefacing his remarks. "However, my opinions are backed by documentary evidence and newspaper reports dealing with cases already tried."

He said the atmosphere at Chapel Hill "is one that seems to encourage deliberate violation of the law."

"That atmosphere is caused in part by professors who fail to distinguish between academic freedom and academic license," he added. "In my opinion, University of North Carolina professors are responsible for the moral growth as well as the intellectual growth of their students."

"I do not object to their opinion about the civil rights bill or the position of the Negro in our society. I do not object to them participating in marches or expressing their opinions on civil rights."

"What I object to is these people we are paying to teach our students telling our students that it is all right to break the law." transcripts of testimony in cases already tried, newspaper accounts and reports of the State Bureau of Investigation.

Opening Leaf Dates Recommended

Dunn May Open August 27

RALEIGH (UPI) — The directors of the Bright Belt Warehouse Association recommended today opening dates for sales on four fave-cured tobacco belts.

The dates, subject to approval by the individual belts, were: Border, Aug. 6; Eastern, Aug. 27; Middle, Sept. 10; and Old Belt, Sept. 22.

Fred Royster, president of the association, said the belts were all expected to approve the recommended dates.

The Border Belt will be the first to decide. A committee of Border Belt warehousemen is scheduled to meet Friday evening in Lumberton. The other belts are expected to hold later meetings.

The decision on the opening date for the Eastern Belt drew the most controversy at today's meeting. Eastern Belt representatives tried unsuccessfully to have the date set for Aug. 25, and when that was defeated, Aug. 26.

They argued that an early date would allow Eastern markets to sell untied leaf and have one day to sell bunched tobacco before the Labor Day holiday.

Gordon L. Crenshaw, president of the Tobacco Association of the United States and vice president of Universal Leaf Co., argued that Eastern growers should have an opportunity to have the greatest buying power possible.

He said in all probability many tobacco companies would be unable to have many buyers on hand at the proposed opening date.

Both Border and Eastern are opening five days later this year than last, because tobacco along the entire coast appears to be up to two weeks behind in progress, compared with 1963.
