Man Gets

ports of unsavory conditions in the McLeod home.

The girl who had been called from work appeared in the courtroom. The judge reminded her to remove the chewing gum before taking the stand where she testified in a clear voice.

She said that on June 22 when she got home from work she found that her father had been "drinking." She said she ate supper and retired around 8:30 p. m. to her room that adjoins her father's. Later she said he called her to the room and that she went in and was asked to undress. She said her father threatened to "kill me" unless she submitted to his sexual advances and that she did.

On cross examination by defense attorney Orton Cameron, she admitted she knew it was wrong.

"Do you realize that you are as guilty as he?" she was asked and replied, "Yes, Sir."

Love, then asked if similar incidents had happened in her family. She said with her sister, now 35, who is unmarried and has five children.

"Is your father the father of the children?" she was asked. "I've been told he was," replied the witness.

She denied that she was mad with her father but admitted that at Easter she was angry and that prompted her to report conditions later to the officers.

Does Not Testify Asked if he wished to go on the stand, McLeod said, "I'd rather not." Approaching the bench when asked if he had any statement to make, he told the judge, "Sadie came and crawled in my bed."

The defense attorney told the court McLeod freely admitted his guilt, "however reprehensible the crime." He pictured the man as having only a fourth grade education, suffering from diabetes with no employment and no source of income other than what his children owe him. He noted that the daughter was a partner in the crime.

However, it will not control the breeding places in the well-served areas just outside the city limits where come so many mosquitoes. We would like to get help from the county on this part of the control, he added.

The machine was bought from the new budget just adopted.

Uzzle stressed that the town will appreciate owners having their vacant lots cut to remove mosquito breeding places, and to eliminate empty cans and jars that would hold water and make good breeding grounds.

and Illinois. Goldwater said he and Rep. William E. Miller, R-N.Y., his vice presidential running mate, would meet later today with Eisenhower and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon at Gettysburg, Pa. Goldwater said they would get together for lunch at 12:30 p.m. EDT at the Eisenhower farm.

Asked whether the meeting was for the purpose of discussing Eisenhower's role in the campaign, Goldwater replied that it would be one of the subjects. He added later that he hoped the former President could play a large part in the Republican campaign.

"We have asked him to give us the number of dates he can fill and how much he feels he can travel," Goldwater said. "We will use him wherever he will go."

Goldwater made the disclosures to reporters on leaving an hour and a half breakfast meeting with half of the GOP members of Congress. He will have a similar meeting Friday with the other half.

The GOP standard bearer said he would especially like to see Eisenhower campaign in the northeastern states where the former President's brand of middle-of-the-road Republicanism has been popular. Goldwater said he also would like to see Eisenhower speak in California and Illinois, two states with big blocks of electoral votes.

Goldwater said that in addition to discussing the campaign roles for Eisenhower and Nixon the four party leaders also planned to discuss plans for the forthcoming GOP unity meeting at Hershey, Pa., next week. Goldwater said he and Miller planned to meet often with Eisenhower and Nixon.

The Arizona senator said that he was highly pleased with the degree of unity in the party since the GOP National Convention. He said frankly he had not expected the current degree of solidarity to be achieved so soon.
