Something New-Whipped Strawberry Ice Box Cake

In our present modern age when food markets are stacked with frozen foods, strawberries are among many varieties of fruits and vegetables one can enjoy every day of the year.

A new way to serve the berries is called whipped strawberry ice box cake. It is made with frozen strawberries and garnished with the fresh green-stemmed variety (when in season).

The cake is prepared similarly to the old-fashioned teaberry filling cake with two layers of plain white cake cut through the middle, yielding four rounds. Each layer is frosted with the creamy pink frosting and stacked together to make a beautiful high cake.

Serve it plain when fresh and the next day with milk when it taste like everybody's favorite - strawberry shortcake.

WHIPPED STRAWBERRY ICE BOX CAKE

2 9-inch white cake layers
1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen strawberries
juice from strawberries plus water to make 1 cup
1 3-oz. pkg. strawberry jello

1/2 cup marshmallow whip
1 cup undiluted evaporated milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Split cool cake layers crosswise making 4 cake rounds. Defrost strawberries and drain juice adding water to make 1 cup of liquid. Heat to liquid boiling point. Place jello in bowl and dissolve by adding hot liquid. Stir and add marshmallow whip. Stir until well blended. Chill until as unbeaten egg white consistency.

Chill milk in ice trays until ice crystals form around edges, approximately 10 to 15 minutes. Whip milk until stiff (1 min.). Add lemon juice and whip until very stiff, perhaps 2 mins. longer. Blend strawberries and marshmallow mixture into whipped milk until well blended. Spread each cake layer with mixture. Place in refrigerator individually until set (approximately 20-25 mins). Remove from refrigerator and stack cake layers, the rounded ones on top and bottom. Garnish with whole fresh strawberries, which have been washed, but not hulled. Refrigerate until ready to serve.
