As South African Minister Speaks

Walkout At UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Africa and Communist delegates staged a mass-walkout from the General Assembly today when South African Foreign Minister Hilarid Mueller was called to speak. The walkout began when Mueller stepped up to the rostrum. Many Asian delegates joined the walkout but some Asians stayed in their places, as did Western European and Latin American delegates.

The demonstration was in protest against South Africa's racial policies.

In his speech Mueller told the assembly South Africa is prepared for any attempt by the U. N. to impose sanctions.

Mueller delivered a wide-ranging defense of his government's racial policies in his 30 minute speech, although 73 delegations were absent at the time.

Outside the assembly hall, Secretary General Thant resumed his role in the attempts to settle the U. N. financial crisis caused by Russia's huge debt to the United Nations.
