Intentory Of Soil Vital To Farmers

Another crop year has passed and now is the time our farmers need to take a soil fertility inventory, reports C. R. Ammons, County Extension Chairman.

Our farmers can learn more about the fertility status of their soil by having it tested at the Soil Testing Laboratory for analysis. The information obtained from having their soil tested will provide a better understanding of fertilizer reactions in their soil and will also enable our farmers to make sound decisions about next year's fertilizer needs.

Practically all farms in Harnett County have one or more fields that need lime. But the amount of lime to use cannot be estimated without knowing what the present pH is and how much organic matter the soil contains. The pH and per cent organic matter are determined by the Soil Testing Laboratory using modern chemical methods. The amount of lime necessary for optimum crop yields will depend on the soil test results and the crop grown.

Phosphorus and potash may become fixed in forms unavailable to plants or leached out of the soil. The extent of phosphorus fixation or potash leaching can be determined by a soil test and if extra applications of phosphorus or potash are needed they can be broadcast before planting the crop.

Soil testing is an important part of modern farming. Oct. and November are the best months to collect soil samples because the weather is favorable and the chemical tests can be completed without delay, says Mr. Ammons.

But Investigator Donald Appell told the committee at the opening of its long-awaited hearings on the Klan that "the overwhelming majority" of Southern law enforcement officers were neither member nor sympathizers of the hooded order.

Chairman Edwin E. Willis, D-La., opened the hearings into the Klan's "invisible empire" with a warning to the secret society that any attempt to physically intimidate witnesses would be punished. Appell took the stand in the jammed House caucus room to give the background of the century-old Klan and its present status. He said "in certain areas of the South we found a very real fear of the Klan among Klansmen, ex-Klansmen, victims of the Klan and the general public."

STAR RISES LATE—For Jack Albertson it was a life of vaudeville and burlesque until, at 54, fame came suddenly with his role in Broadway's "The Subject Was Roses." Albertson now is in Hollywood mulling over the many movie offers pouring in.

SEXIER ROLES?—This tall, cool beauty—Mariette Hartley—is tired of playing the wide-eyed, innocent gal, the type of role she played in "Ride the High Country." She says she is ready for sexier, more dramatic roles, given the chance.

POCKET POOCH—A tiny puppy finds temporary shelter from the havoc of war in the pocket of Marine James L. French's combat fatigues. The pup was found in a burning Vietnamese village during a Marine sweep through Viet Cong territory.
