

For Dunn Show This Weekend

Many Horses Expected

Dozens of horses from a half dozen states along the Atlantic Seaboard will be arriving here this next weekend for what is expected to be one of North Carolina's largest horse shows.

South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, New Jersey, Maryland and Tennessee are expected to be included in the state's representation.

The show will begin at 7:30 on Friday night, go through morning, afternoon and night sessions on Saturday and a final afternoon session on Sunday.

The championship classes will be run off Sunday.

The show will be held at 4-A farms owned by Mr. and Mrs. Al Wullenwaber.

Special facilities, including lights for night showings are being set up. Dozens of temporary stalls, bleachers for spectators and special places for cars around the ring are included in the facilities.

The Dunn Shrine club is putting on the show. They are raising money here to erect a Shrine Club headquarters.

Ermon Godwin, president of the club, said today he is looking for a large crowd.

Over $3,000 in cash, trophies and ribbons will be given winners in the various divisions.

Many local riders are planning to exhibit in some of the divisions which run from equitation to jumping classes on thru scores of other class showings.

President Godwin said he hoped to make it an annual affair.

Only the Blowing Rock Horse show and one held yearly at Pinehurst are expected to be larger than the one here. The one at Blowing Rock each August is the largest in the nation outside of the annual National Horse show at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Some of the south's finest riders will be here for the show.

There will be two rings set up. One, the main ring, has already been set up. The other, for jumping, will be set up this week. A five to six acre parking lot has been set up for the spectators to bring their cars in.

Admission to the Grand Stand will be $1.00 a performance.

Persons wishing to purchase spaces for their cars may do so at $15.00 for the show. Members of the Shrine Club have tickets and they can also be purchased at Thomas Walsgreen Drug Store. They can, of course, also be purchased at showtime at the show grounds at the 4-A farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Wullenwaber are doing everything possible to make the show a success.

TO COMPLETE HERE — The Duke of Burlington will show under saddle and in harness. He is ridden by Cindy Williams and owned by Martin "Re" Mitchell of Burlington. The Duke has an enviable record of winning and will compete in the Horse Show sponsored by Dunn Shrine Club at 4-W Horse Farm, November 12, 13 and 14.

Controversial Novel At Stake

Court Will Rule On "Fanny Hill"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed today to rule on a Massachusetts court decision that banned the spicy 18th century novel, "Fanny Hill," as obscene.

A New York State court has allowed the sale of the novel which also has been the subject of lawsuits in New Jersey and Illinois.

By today's action, the court agreed to hear arguments in the Massachusetts case and hand down an opinion later in the term.

The state's supreme judicial court found the book obscene and upheld a finding by the Suffolk County superior court making sellers liable to a fine and imprisonment.

A current movie is based on the book.

In other actions today, the Supreme Court:

—Denied a hearing to a group of New York City white parents who protested the pairing of a white and a Negro school in Queens County. State courts upheld the right of the city Board of Education to achieve a more equal racial balance through reorganization of school attendance zones.

—Accepted for decision a Justice Department appeal on an unsuccessful antitrust action against the Pabst Brewing Co. in acquiring the Blatz Brewing Co., from Schenley Industries, Inc.

The court announced that the Massachusetts appeal on the "Fanny Hill" case would be heard along with one brought by Edward Mishkin, a New York bookseller found guilty of dealing in obscene books. Arguments in the Mishkin case are set for the week of Dec. 6.

"Fanny Hill," also known as "John Cleland's Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure," deals with the experiences of a young English prostitute. Recently, G. P. Putnam's Sons, a New York publishing firm,
