Fashion Genius Jim Daugherty

Impresses Local Audience

By Abigail L. Flanders Post Staff Writer

You walk into a dressing room where his masterpieces stand tall and elegant upon a steel rack. His face is stern and serious as he examines each garment and properly fits it with the nervously awaiting model to which it is to be ornamented. Immediately you think it's going to be another "Yes," "No", staunch, stiff interview with another snub nose fashion designer....But after things quiet down backstage...after each Cinderella has found her magical matching garment, you meet a smiling, lovable, amazing artist....James Daugherty.

Top notch is not exactly the word for Daugherty's work. He comes better under the heading of sensational both as a person and as an artist. He is a veritable genius. Shy, and boyish, he talks about each fashion as if each were his own personal mistress, almost too delightful an experience to reveal, yet too explosively and amazingly beautiful to conceal. Perhaps this is because James Daugherty, even as a young boy living in Los Angeles had a very special past time. He watched women...Not the ones that everyone stares at, the ones that are labeled "beautiful" at the time of birth, but the average woman to whom no one really takes any second glance.

Fortunately, Daugherty did take a first, second and perhaps even a third glance, picturing in his eye all the wonderful things that could happen to her appearance just with a different type of dress, or maybe some accessories. Daugherty believed in his own mind that this woman could be looked at with just as much admiration as the women who supposedly" walk in beauty which is also one of is nothing simple about a like the night." The forum will be conducted

Special Project

Will Benefit

J. C. Smith

The School of Business at Johnson C. Smith University will benefit from a special project now being undertaken by the Charlotte Blue Chapter of the National Association of Accountants

Accounting books and periodicals collected by the association will be donated to the business school. The project has already collected 600 publications. A goal of 1000 has been set.

The drive started in October. While it is expected to be a continuous project, a representative from the university will take part in a presentation December 9 at 7 p.m. at Sharon View Country Club.
