400 Delegates Attend

Most Crucial Meetings

Recently in Dayton some 400 delegates and observers from 19 states attended one of the most crucial meetings ever held within the National Black Political Assembly. By an overwhelming 2-3 majority the NBA delegates voted to adopt a new structure, a Statement of Principles, a Constitution, and elected officers under the new structure.

The decisions of this meeting climaxed more than three years of struggle to define the purpose of the NBA, outline a political direction, and adopt clear procedures for action.

Within the last year in particular the NBA had developed serious internal conflicts largely provoked by part-playwriter, political activist, Amiri Baraka of Newark, New Jersey and the Congress of African People which he heads. Baraka's disruptive tactics, harassment and intimidation of the delegates, and abrasive leadership style had become the major obstacle to further NBA progress, growth and development.

In the face of massive mounting opposition to his leadership and the ruthless tactics of the Congress of African People, Baraka submitted his resignation as Secretary General before the new structure was adopted in Dayton. In submitting his resignation Baraka expressed an interest in National Health Insurance, Tax Reform, and Full Employment legislation. The NBA is also expected to launch a drive to register a significant number of the same 6 million Blacks who remain unregistered in the U.S.

Plans for a series of State Conventions are also underway. The assembly plans a massive effort in the southern states where with the exception of Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Kentucky, no assemblies have been active since Gary in 1972. The State Conventions will elect the 5,000 delegates to the national convention, and prepare recommendation on the 1976 platform and resolution on issues. The ratification of the platform and nomination of the Black Presidential Candidate will occur at the National Black Political Convention at Cincinnati in March.
