

Dr. Williams Has High Interest In Clothes

By Jacquie Levister
Post Staff Writer

"I don't consider myself a particularly good dresser. I just try to present a good appearance," says Dr. C.W. Williams.

Dr. Williams, a local surgeon with a hectic schedule, has a high interest in clothes. He said, "the things that I am really interested in, my patients would think I'm nuts if I wore them to the office."

To accommodate both his professional demeanor and his personal preference, Dr. Williams has found he has no choice but to maintain two wardrobes. When not at his office or one of the local hospitals, he prefers to wear leather, suede and pigskin goods. "Those styles I cannot wear to the office," stated Williams.

Two wardrobes necessitates two modes of shopping. For office wear there are local stores such as Ivey's and J.O. Jones at which he can make purchases from the racks. "I think I am too 'fat' to buy European fashions from the rack. If I am getting a designer suit it will be an American designer such as Bill Blass," stated Williams. He continued by saying, "I get things that can be made to fit with the slightest amount of alterations."

Dr. Williams subscribes to fashion magazines such as Gentlemen's Quarterly to stay abreast of the latest fashions. "I sometimes see things that appeal to me that I cannot find locally. When this happens I will wait perhaps six months until I find what it is that I want. However, there are times when I have waited to find and purchase that one item I've been looking for, only to find it either doesn't fit or I simply don't like it on my person," a smiling Williams related.

When making purchases for the personal side of his personality he shops in some of the larger department stores of New York; Bloomingdale's being one of his favorites.

When asked if he felt he was extravagant with his purchases, Dr. Williams remarked, "If I find a good leather suit with a medium lapel that can be worn maybe 10 years then I don't think paying $600. for it is an extreme. Clothes are not something that C.W. Williams has just developed an interest for. He said that his stepfather was wearing silk shirts and tailored suits when he was just a kid. His (William's stepfather) love for clothes and dressing up was contagious. "When I was in school I would sell all my clothes at the end of the school year, work during the summer and save my money so that when I returned to school in the fall I would have an entirely new wardrobe," related Williams.

"Natural fibers is always my choice over synthetics because of their durability and relative easy care," continued Dr. Williams. "I don't think that I have one favorite color though I know my wife would disagree with me," added Williams. "I don't care too much for green."

Jimmy Grier, a local master tailor, does a creditable job of assuring a good fit for me. I find it difficult to buy a pair of pants that can be worn without alterations," he stated.

CHARLES DANNELLY
...Dresses to please his wife

Dannelly: "You Can Tell A Man By His Clothes"

"I dress to meet the approval of my wife," says Charlie S. Dannelly. "She is my most severe critic and usually has a strong opinion about what is best for me."

"I feel though, that I contributed greatly and maybe even started the evolution of local principals from the basic blue and grey suits into varying color schemes and the emergence of personal style," continued Dannelly.

Charlie S. Dannelly is principal of Quail Hollow Junior High School, a Johnson C. Smith University graduate and Chairman of the Tip-off Tournament (an annual basketball event at Johnson C. Smith).

If there is truth in the statement you can tell a man by his clothes; then one has only to look at Charlie Dannelly to know he is both bold and meticulous.

A man that will shop anywhere and that looks everywhere, Mr. Dannelly would dress the same regardless of his position. "My main objective is to look decent. I will shop anywhere from Tate Brown's to an outlet store. I, quite simply, am a shirt and tie person," said Dannelly.

Plaids and stripes are a dominate part of Dannelly's wardrobe because of a versatility they offer. "A plaid jacket can be the impetus of several outfits by simply changing and interchanging the color variation of the accessories," continued Dannelly. "Blues, tans and browns are base colors from which I start." He then added, "Skin tone plays a crucial part in selecting a garment."

A man of tall and slim stature, Charlie Dannelly buys predominately European cut suits because of their body cuts. He more or less stays away from designer items but does like the flair of Cardin, Arthur Richards and some of the others.

"A man can, however, wear a $300 suit and not be dressed due to the fact that he failed to put proper emphasis on his accessories. An ill fitting jacket, rundown and unpolished shoes, improper sleeve length of jacket and shirt and clashing rather than complimenting color contrasts of shirt and tie all can ruin an otherwise elegant garment," related Dannelly.

For those casual occasions when a shirt and tie simply won't do, Dannelly prefers, in summer, a crisp print shirt with pale natural colored slacks. White or pale blue slacks made of linen or a linen polyester blend is his forte. During the winter months a turtleneck sweater, slacks and usually a Sussek sports jacket of wool gabardine feels most comfortable and suits his personal image.

Occasionally Dannelly will wear jewelry; That wear is usually confined to a gold chain around the neck for casual wear or a gold watch chain with a three piece suit. "I always wear a copper bracelet for my arthritis," a smiling Dannelly said.

A teacher by nature, Charlie Dannelly thinks teachers are the most influential people on earth because of their contact and the persuasion they can exert with-over the young. "I want the young people that I meet to know they too can look good."

Flavorful Spanish Translation

If you're going to Spain, get set for surprises. The major cities and the places in between Barcelona and the colorful south, between Malaga and the lesser-known but captivating Atlantic coast, between Santiago and San Sebastian, and Madrid—all provide stunning scenic and historical splendors. The people everywhere are immensely hospitable and WHAT FOOD! Fantastic! Spain's cookery is imaginative and delicious (not at all spicy), and the sea fare is outstanding, especially the savory mixed seafood casserole, called zarzuela.

As in America, dishes made with shellfish are special occasion fare for modern Spanish homemakers—and many use less expensive canned tuna (as we do) for quick "convenience" versions of seafood favorites. A good example is this recipe for Tuna Zarzuela, a flavorful and easy translation of the original with little of its expense of time-consuming cookery.

TUNA ZARZUELA
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 cup chopped onion
2 small clove garlic, minced
2 cans (10 1/2 ounces each) condensed tomato bisque
1/4 cup cream or milk
1/2 teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon brandy
1/2 cup frozen peas, thawed
1/2 cup sliced pimiento-stuffed olives
2 cans (6 1/2 or 7 ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil
Hot cooked rice
Toasted slivered almonds.

Heat butter in large saucepan. Add onion and garlic; cook until tender. Stir in undiluted soup, cream, Tabasco, salt and brandy. Add peas. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Uncover and add olives and tuna; heat. Serve over hot cooked rice and garnish with slivered almonds.
YIELD: 4 servings.
