Form Of Dress

By Hoyle H. Martin Sr.
Post Executive Editor

Robert L. Davis, recently named the Post's "Man of the Year," has also been named one of the "10 Best Dressed Men of the Year," for the period ending June 30.

The Post's editor-publisher, William "Bill" Johnson, said, "This recognition of physical appearance reflects our concern with personal - but humble-pride, a pleasing personality and a likeable attitude because these are areas that we feel every individual should be conscious about. Davis best illustrates, in our judgment, these qualities in the Charlotte community. This recognition indicates too our view that physical appearance is a reflection of personality and attitude."

The dapperly dressed Davis - in a blue pen-stripped suit with a white shirt, blue tie and red dots and blue patten-leather shoes - said he felt "honored." A public school administrator and leader of the Black Political Caucus, Davis said, "Your physical being is important because an initial appearance often leaves a lasting impression. Furthermore, appearance enables one often to gain attention which is often necessary to accomplish desired objectives. I simply try to dress in a manner that reflects these views."

Davis noted also that "while wearing apparel does not make the person, it often reflects one's personality. He said his favorite colors are black, blue and white. However, he prefers all white in the summer.

In responding to questions about current men's styles, Davis said "I question some of the way-out fashions of today - high heel shoes, bold mixed colors in shirts, etc. - I favor a more conservative form of dress."

The next time you see an erect-standing, immaculately dressed black man in a white suit, sky blue shirt, patten-leather white shoes and white socks with a friendly debonair manner it will probably be Mr. Robert L. "Bob" Davis.
