

Jeanne Bohn To Take Look At

Teenage Girls

This year 10 percent of all teenage American girls will become pregnant.

WSOC-TV's Jeanne Bohn takes an in-depth look at this problem as she visits Charlotte's Florence Crittenton Home for unmarried mothers and Hunter House, a facility where young adolescent mothers are taught how to care for their babies, on this week's "Eyewitness Journal" Sunday, November 13 at 12:30am.

Serving the Charlotte area since 1903, the Florence Crittenton Home is one of forty others across the nation. Today it houses 65 residents, the home's full capacity. The demand for this service increases every day. The teenage birthrate among girls younger than 14 has risen in addition to the overall rate in general of adolescent mothers. Jeanne Bohn talks with Kenneth Sipes, director of Florence Crittenton, and counselor Mary Jane Falls about these factors and the services the home offers.

Ms. Bohn examines another organization helpful to the adolescent mother - Hunter House. Marion Hunter, founder of the home and board member of Crittenton, explains that Hunter House gives young girls a chance to complete their education and make an attempt at a successful start toward adulthood and the responsibilities of motherhood.

The year 1977 is indeed another excellent year for Clyde W. Brown, the 1977 winner for the ninth time of the John M. "Boo" Murphy Award. This award was first created in 1967 in recognition of John "Boo" Murphy, one of the great supporters for the Charlotte Alumni Chapter of Johnson C. Smith University who rendered tremendous services of fund raising, and securing a large number of membership.

Each year this award is given to the member of the Charlotte Alumni Chapter who has surpassed all others in the fund raising drive. Approximately $10,000 was raised from the entire membership drive.

The John M. "Boo" Murphy Award along with a check for $100 was awarded to Clyde W. Brown by Dr. J. Matthew Murphy, son of the deceased, during the intermission period of the Annual Charlotte Alumni Fellowship Ball held at the Charlotte Civic Center. Along with Murphy to sponsor the award was James Melvin, President of Smith's Charlotte Alumni Chapter.

Three other prizes were also awarded at this event. Second prize was awarded to Zoel Hargraves Jr., third prize to Mrs. Grace Stevenson and fourth prize to Ms. Glenda
