Rev. Ben Chavis
...Making progress

Released From

Intensive Care

By Linda Florence
Post Staff Writer
The Rev. Ben Chavis of the Wilmington 10 was released from the Intensive Care Unit of Central Prison Hospital in Raleigh on Friday.

Two weeks ago, Chavis suffered a severely ruptured appendix with the complication of an infection. He was fed intravenously during the 10 day intensive care period. "He's making progress," Mrs. June C. Davenport, Chavis's sister and member of the Wilmington 10 Defense Committee, said Wednesday. "He's been extremely ill and our main concern right now has been trying to get him better," Mrs. Davenport explained.

Chavis reportedly began experiencing pains in the stomach after eating the noonday meat at McCain Prison at McCain, N.C. on June 19. He was not permitted to see the prison doctor until Tuesday morning. "Evidently, they didn't realize the severity of the pain at that time," Mrs. Davenport suggested.

The doctor diagnosed the illness as an appendicitis and suggested that Chavis be rushed to a nearby hospital. However, Chavis was placed on a stretcher in the back of a station wagon and sent to Central Prison Hospital in Raleigh which is some 120 miles away.

The family doctor was requested to be called in but, prison rules won't allow any doctors outside the prison to check on inmates.

Mrs. Davenport said he felt the prison doctors were "doing the best they can under the circumstances."

But you know, you'd feel better if a family doctor could be present," she said.

So far only family members have been allowed in to see Chavis with the exception of Lennox Hinds, head of the National Black Lawyers Association and the Rev. Leon White, head of the Commission for Racial Justice for the United Church of Christ.

Ben is a minister with the United Church of Christ.

"With prayer and God's help, Ben feel that he'll be able to make it through," Mrs. Davenport concluded.

"10" Indepth Story On Sale

An indepth story of the Wilmington 10 case is on sale now in the July issue of Sepia, a national magazine. The "full story of the case was written by a local reporter, Milton Jordan of the Charlotte Observer.

Vented Storage

Space Reduces

Onion Losses

For best results with the onion crop you harvest from the garden this year, select a storage place that is cool, dry and well ventilated.

The air circulation is important to good storage, point out agricultural extension specialists at North Carolina State University. And the idea storage temperature is 32 to 36 degrees.

If you don't have these conditions, try to get as close as possible.

Here are some other factors that should be considered in storing onions:

—Some varieties store better than others. Some of the best ones for storing are Creole, Australian Brown, Red Wethersfield, Danvers, Ebenezer, White Portugal, Southport and Early Yellow Globe.

—Onions should be mature before harvesting.
