Jane Pauley Coming To Pfeiffer

Jane Pauley will appear on the Campus of Pfeiffer College on February 9, 1979 as part of the North Carolina Political Issues Forum. Ms. Pauley is the co-host of the long running "Today" show on NBC.

Since joining the "Today" show in '76, Ms. Pauley has not been restricted to in-studio work. She has reported from distant places like Nashville, Arizona, Plymouth, Massachusetts, Detroit, and Plains, Georgia. She also covered the Silver Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II in London, England.

Prior to co-hosting the "Today" show, she spent a year as co-anchor of the nightly news on NBC's WMAQ-TV in Chicago, Illinois. She was the first female to ever hold this position in that city.

Born in Indianapolis, Indiana October 31, 1950, she is a graduate of Indiana University where she received a BS in Political Science. Upon graduating from college, she became involved in politics for a brief period before joining WISH-TV in Indianapolis as a mid-day anchor and weekend reporter.

In 1975, Ms. Pauley was the winner of a nationwide search by WMAQ-TV for an anchorperson to co-host their nightly news program with Floyd Kalber. Six months later, she came to NBC.

She was the recipient of an honorary Doctor of Journalism degree from DePaul University in May 1978. She is the youngest person in history to ever receive an honorary doctorate from this college.

The North Carolina Political Issues Forum is an on-going speaker's series inaugurated by Jimmy Carter in 1975. Speakers for the coming year's Forum will include North Carolina Attorney General Rufus Edmisten on September 11; U.S. Senate Candidate and North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram on October 9; Howard

Lee, who is North Carolina Secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development on October 30; North Carolina U.S. Senator Robert Morgan on November 13; Dr.

Arthur Flemming who is Commissioner of the U.S. Office of Civil Rights on November 27;

North Carolina Supreme Court Associate Justice, I.
