Walter Tucker Says

Minority-Owned Banks Are Sensitive To Needs Of Blacks

by Susan Ellsworth
Post Staff Writer

A Minority Bank Program was launched recently by the Carter Administration to coordinate public and private resources in support of minority-owned and operated banks.

"This program is an effort on the part of government and private enterprise to deposit government funds in minority-owned banks and encourage the private sectors to do business with black owned banks," stated Walter Tucker, senior vice president of the Mechanics and Farmers Bank in Charlotte.

Originated in 1908, the Mechanics and Farmers Bank is headquartered in Durham with branch offices in Charlotte and Raleigh.

The Minority Bank Program will offer a management development program to participating banks, according to John Heimann, Comptroller of the Currency and Acting Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The management development agenda, Heimann said, "will influence all levels of minority bank personnel. The objective of this segment will be to assist banks in developing more effective management teams, improve loan and investment performance, enhance the market capabilities of the bank, reduce its personnel turnover and increase productivity." Government agencies are sponsoring training programs through grants for the minority-owned bank employees.

What does a minority-owned bank have to offer Black people?

"We are offering the same services as a regular bank but are more convenient and can relate to loan customers more than a white person," Tucker explained and continued, "We are more sensitive to the needs of minorities."

In Charlotte, Mechanics and Farmers Bank is located on Beatties Ford Road and on South Independence Boulevard.

Livingstone Receives

$608,500 Grant

SALISBURG—President F. George Shipman has announced Livingstone College's receipt of a Title III Grant for the 1978-79 school year in the amount of $608,500. The grant award will be used to strengthen the areas of curriculum and faculty development, student services and administrative operations.

Title III is a division of the U.S. Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended, and provides support for strengthening developing institutions that serve large percentages of low income and minority students. The program is administered by the Division of Institutional Development of the U.S. Office of Education and funds more than 250 schools annually with grants ranging from $100,000 to $700,000. This year's grant to Livingstone is one of the largest one-year grants awarded to a four-year private institution and is the largest 12-month grant received by the College since it began participating in the Title III Program.

The Title III Program is coordinated by Ms. Catrella Steele, who is responsible for programmatic and fiscal monitoring of the grant and making the necessary reports to the Office of Education.

According to Dr. Shipman, the Title III program has been instrumental in moving Livingstone more toward the mainstream of higher education, by allowing the college to develop and implement new and innovative approaches to learning and helping the college to keep pace with the changes in today's society that often call for enhancing academic programs and reordering institutional priorities. The 1978-79 grant includes partial support for 18 programs.

SOUTHERN FOLKS

Joseph Burnett

Joseph Burnett is a trainmaster. As an officer of Southern he supervises more than 300 people in the railway's Piedmont Division. It's his responsibility to see that customers' shipments get where they're going on time.

Joe joined Southern right after graduating from Florida A&M. And he likes the advancement he's made since then.

As part of Southern Folks, Joseph's future is bright because Southern's future is bright. Railroading is one of America's real growth industries.

Railroads now carry more freight each year than all the trucks, airplanes and barges combined. And by 1990 we expect a 143 percent increase in railroad traffic levels.

We think this means a profitable future for Southern Railway and Southern Folks.
