Page 2-THE CHARLOTTE POST-Thursday, November 23, 1978

Meaning Of Walton's Defeat

Chitorials & Comments

by Hoyle H. Martin Sr. Post Editorial Writer

Last week's issue of THE AFRO-AMERICAN carried an editorial entitled "The Brooke Defeat." With the exception of a few words and phrase changes, and the substitution of the name "Bob Walton" for Edward W. Brooke, here is the major portion of that editorial:

"We could see, the defeat of Commissioner Walton coming - but we never got fully prepared for its actuality.

The handwriting was on the wall in Mecklenburg County. We saw him drowning in a rough seas of trouble stemming from his split with Commissioner Liz Hair and the messy involvement with Peter Foley and Bill Booe which led to many Hair supporters turning against him. This was quite evident in the Nov. 7 election.

We recognized this right off the bat. Yet we could not get ready for it. We could not get ready for the hard, cold fact that a Walton defeat meant that not a single black face will be among the five commissioners when they convene in December.

There was also real difficulty in bringing ourselves around to the realization that the defeat meant that we were not moving ahead - but losing important, hard earned ground."

Then came the most agonizing question: Would we have to wait as long for the election of another black

The People Speak

Last week, the City Council conducted two days of Public Hearings to allow citizens of the nine Community Development Neighborhood Strategy Areas (NSA) to express their concerns and interests in the CD preliminary plans for the next three fiscal years.

In addition to requests from about 20 social services agencies for neariy $1.4 million in program funds, numerous requests were made for public improvements such as street lights, the opening of some cutthrough streets and storm drainage.

Considerable concern was also expressed about the poor and unsafe housing conditions of many residents residing in City-owned property. Residents, particularly from the West Morehead NSA, were very vocal in their conerns about the slow pace of their relocation into better housing.

commissioner as we waited for the election of Walton and his immediate predecessor Rowe Motley? The rise of Motley and Walton took a long, time. They didn't make it until 1973 when Motley became the first black member ever of the Mecklenburg Board of County Commissioners.

Yet, as hard as it is, we must confront some hard facts and learn a lesson from the tragic Walton defeat. First, we must admit that it was Commissioner Walton who largely defeated himself. This fact should serve as a strong reminder to our other political leaders. That reminder is that they - if they are to remain afloat- must learn and practice the art of compromise.

Walton's apparent failure to initiate a compromise with Liz Hair, a proven vote-getter among both blacks and whites, gave him a short-term victory as vice chairman of the Commission but a long term loss to those desiring his public. office leadership and contribution.

However, Commissioner Walton's outstanding record as a fighter for justice and fair play should not be forgotten by the citizens of Mecklenburg County. In particular, we should be thankful for the courageous positions he took on many highly controversial issues. Walton's articulate and skillful presentation of the issues will be missed, but we hope for not more than one 2-year term.

NONE ARE MORE HOPELESSLY EN. SLAVED THAN THOSE WHO FALSELY BE LIEVE THEY ARE FREE." GOETHE

233417 J

Blacks' Destiny In Own Hands

In Heart Disease Risk Black, White Children Differ

Special To The Post

mical factors may account for white American men being low more likely to have coronary artery disease and a heart attack and black men being more likely to have high blood pressure and suffer strokes. According to two reports today to the American Heart Association's 51st Scientific Sessions, these differences relate to body chemistry and they begin to be expressed early in childhood.

Three UNC scientists--H. Alfred Tyroler, M.D., Gerardo Heiss, M.D., and Richard Mowery, M.S.-were involved in research reported by Charles J. Glueck, M.D., professor of pediatrics and medicine and director of the Lipid Research Clinic, University of Cincin-nati College of Medicine. The other scientists were Bobbe Christian, PH.D., University of Texas; Peter O. Kwiterovich, Johns Hopkins University; and Ida deGroot, M.P.H., University of Cincinnati.

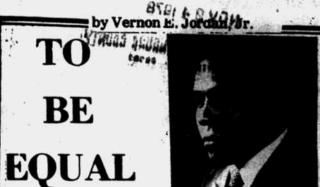

tive Lipid Research Clinics

terol in blacks and higher triglycerides and VLDL-C cholesterol in whites, on both. The collaborative LRC program using identically standardized laboratories allowed the pooling of data from child-ren having broad demograph-ic diversity."

OFRSHID

In the second report, A.W. Voors, M.D., D.P.H., associate professor of preventive medicine at Louisiana State University Medical Center, explained that all the schoolage children of the biracial community of Bogalusa, La., were examined as part of the Bogalusa Heart Study, a large epidemiological survey. A sample of 278 children, divided into groups by blood pressure level and matched by age, sex. and race, was re-exmined a year or two after a first observation.

The results suggest that the kidneys of blacks and whites handle chemicals in slightly different ways, at least among children in the higher blood pressure group. For instance, among black children in this group, there was a positive correlation between blood pressure and sodium in the urine. That is, the higher the blood pressure, the more sodium was excreted. White children with high blood pressure did not have increased sodium excretion. At the same time, the black children excreted less potassium than did whites, though both groups apparently took in about the same amount. Both sodium and potassium influence blood pressure. The black children also had lower levels of renin activity. Renin, an enzyme released in the kidney, controls the activity of angiotensin, a hormone that constricts blood vessels and raises blood pressure.

PUBLIC LIDRARY OF

Election Drifts To The Right

The 1978 election shows that, seen in the long perspective of history, much has changed. In 1963, Medgar Evers was murdered in Mississippi. In 1978, his brother won a fourth of the state's vote for the Senate seat held by an old-line segregationist.

In 1963, Strom Thurmond was riding high as the champion of Dixie racism. In 1978, he was an equal opportunity employer and he was kissing black babies and campaigning in black districts for votes.

But black voting power is still more of a potential weapon than a real one. The black vote elected Jimmy Carter in 1976, but in 1978 it demonstrated its effectiveness in only several contests.

It is absolutely imperative to maximize black political participation. Low voter turnouts deprive us of one of our basic weapons of self-defense.

At the same time, candidates who lost because they expected black votes to help them should not complain about low turnout. In many cases, they did very little to excite the black community, to campaign in it, or to make a real effort to get out the black vote.

Too often liberal candidates refused to go after the black vote for fear of alienating more conservative white districts, and the inevitable result was that black voters could not believe that the professed liberal who ignored them in the campaign would suddenly become interested in their problems after the election.

Where blacks had a major stake in the outcome of the election, they voted heavily, as in Philadelphia where they were instrumental in destroying Mayor Rizzo's plans for a third term.

Black voters again demonstrated that they are not wedded to a single party. They demonstrated that the Democratic Party could not count on their votes when the Democratic candidate was perceived as being against black interests or when the Republican candidate had a track record of fighting for civil rights.

This was most obvious in Massachussette where black voters supported Republican Senat or Edward Brooke's losing effort to keep his seat and also voted in large numbers for a liberal Republican running against a conservative Democrat. And in Illinois, Republican Senator Charles Percy was re-elected with the help of many black votes the Democrats counted on.

Elsewhere in the nation, black either voted for Republican candidates perceived as being more favorable to their interests, or simply abstained from voting for Democrats who refused to actively seek their ballots. The most disturbing thing about the election of 1978 was that the political center of gravity appears to have shifted slightly to the right, a shift that was evident not only in the results of the election, but in the campaign itself.

program. Of the approximately 225 relocations made each year, CD administrators pointed out that ittakes 120 days to relocate 60 percent of these and 240 days to relocate 40 percent. Council members as well as

Other speakers, numbering about 22, told the Council they wanted more in the way of job training programs, employment for youth, assistance for the battered women's program and more economic development activity particularly in the Third Ward NSA. The degree to which these services were made available would determine crime rates, some said.

The concerns stated at the Hearings will be reflected in the 3-year preliminary plan being prepared by Hill, Baltimore, Houston, and the CD staff. Cincinnati, they matched 740 black children from LRC pre-The people have spoken and challvalence studies in these cities enged the City's Community Deveby age, sex, and total cholestlopment Department to develop a erol levels with 740 whites-1480 in all. These children creative plan that will reflect their were further divided into two interest, concerns and needs. groups: 412 pairs randomly selected from pediatric popu We wish them well in this effort. -lation groups, and 328 pairs of children selected from pedia-Something On Your Mind?

are called high density lipo-protein (HDL), low density development of coronary heart disease.

Each pair of children was compared for levels of triglyceride and for cholesterol contained within the three lipoproteins, statistical measurements that Dr. Glueck and his associates designated HDL-C, LDL-C, and VLDL-C.

The difference between black and white children was marked in those whose total cholesterol was elevated. The difference of 7.9 milligrams per 100 milliters for boys and 7.6 for girls), and lower levels of VLDL-C (4.6 less for black boys, 4.9 for girls). Triglyce-Working with the collabora- rides were also much lower in this group (a difference of (LRC) program in Chapel 23.4 for boys, 23.5 for girls). The differences for the randomly selected group were not quite so pronounced, but showed the same significant trends: black children had higher HDL-C levels and lower triglyceride and VLDL-C readings. Dr. Glueck said that the LDL-C levels were slightly, though not significantly, lower among black children. These differences were tric population groups by vir-tue of elevated blood levels of similar to those seen in adult males, Dr. Glueck said, and "may by related to the higher incidence and prevalence of coronary heart disease in white males than black males, which may be mediated through higher HDL-C choles-

DALLAS--Inherited biochelipoprotein (LDL), and very density lipoprotein (VIDL). Triglyceride is primarily carried by VLDL. HDL is believed to mobilize choresterol, including that deposited in arteries; LDL and VLDL are associated with deposition of cholesterol in arteries and the Particular concern was expressed about the Community Development Department's housing relocation

"Something on your mind" is the name of a column devoted to you-- the young at heart readers of this

:

5

write about, let us hear from you.

less of age.

some way to young people, regard-cholesterol or triglycerides. two types of blood fat.

Cholesterol is not soluble in Or any other subject you want to water; therefore it is carried in the bloodstream within three major "packets" which

The boundaries of the electoral debate were set by those who wanted to cut taxes, cut government, cut social programs that help the poor, and cut programs that enhance equal opportunities.

Supporters of an activist, socially responsive government were on the defensive. Most of them muted their liberalism. They accepted the wrong ground rules, and joined in the attack on government spending and inflation without also stressing the need for full employment and for urban revitalization.

been pushed into education. the large urban centers, edu But, given the nation's declining birthrate and the cation would seem to be one of the few areas in which an enterprising student would want to specialize at this time.

institutions on the graduate increasing competition for level. So, in reality, they have teaching jobs. especially in Admissions Program For Whites

Black Lawyers Approve Rutgers

Special To The Post WASHINGTON (NNPA) The National Bar Association has announced its support of the recommendation made by the Rutgers University Facul-ty that the Special Admissions program be retained and ex-tended to include economic-ally disadvantaged white stu-

graduates of black colleges have had difficulty gaining acceptances outside of these

The Rutgers University faculty voted 34 to 3 for the retention of the Special Admission program. The pro-gram will extend its special admission population to 30 percent from 25 percent.

"The vote culminated months of cooperative effort between Rutgers' students, faculty and concerned citizens from the Newark community. We hope this joint effort is evidence of the direction other university communities can take as they attempt to resolve affirmative action questions in this post Bakke, era," said Junius Williams, President of the National Bar Association.

of affirmative action programs. These programs attempt to increase opportunities in education and employment for victims of past dis-crimination. In light of the ongoing judicial question of how to be more equitable in the enforcement of admission

criterion, the Rutgers decisions is a giant step toward the resolution of this issue.

However, the NBA will remain vigilant to the imple-mentation of the extended admissions program to assure that the inclusion of disadvantaged whites will not be to the detriment of minorities who historically have been disproportionately excluded from educational and economic opportunities, William points NBA recognizes the clear constitutional legitimacy and necessity for the continuation

"We will look to the admini-strators of the Special Admissions program for evidence that they will not use the extension as a means of letting more white students into the university, while at the same time reducing the number of blacks and other minorities admitted," said Williams.

Subscribe to the Charlotte Post! Your support helps!

newspaper--as long as it relates in THE CHARLOTTE POST

"THE PEOPLES NEWSPAPER" Established 1918 Published Every Thursday By The Charlotte Post Publishing Co., Inc. 1524 West Blvd.-Charlotte, N.C. 28208 Telephones (704) 376-0496-376-0497 Circulation, 9,915

60 YEARS OF CONTINUOUS SERVICE

BILL JOHNSON....Editor Publisher BERNARD REEVES.. General Manager SHIRLEY HARVEY ... Advertising Director HENRY ALASKA ... Business Manager

Second Class Postage No. 965500 Paid At Charlotte, N.C. under the Act of March 3, 1878

Member National Newspaper Publishers Association

North Carolina Black Publishers Association

Deadline for all news copy and photos is 5 p.m. Monday. All photos and copy submitted becomes the property of the POST, and will not be returned.

> National Advertising Representative Amalgamated Publishers, Inc.

45 W. 5th Suite 1403 2400 S. Michigan Ave. New York, N.Y. 10036 Chicago, Ill. 60616 Calumet (212) 489-1220 5-0200

Our New Day Begun Black Education Progress

by BenjaminL. Hooks Special To The Post In recent years, reports the National Advisory Committee on Black Higher Education, black college attendance has been outstanding. The committee, however, at the same time warned that this progress has been "insufficient" and "fragile."

For those who have been abreast of civil rights progress over the years, from time to time, received information about the increasing number of blacks in higher

Benjamin L. Hooks education. Indeed, we have NAACP executive director also been aware that even before Allan Bakke's challion signifies the beginning of a long overdue, detailed analyenge to the special admissions sis of black achievement and program at the University of the immense hurdles that are California, Davis Medical yet to be overcome in black School, a decline had already started in the number of higher education. One reality that the report blacks in such programs as medicine and law at white institutions.

the participation of blacks in This observation, of course, technical and natural science s not in any way meant to fields. This is a problem that diminish the importance of the every black organization and work that has been started under the chairmanship of Dr. institution must keep to Elias Blake, Jr., the highly address immediately. respected president of Clark College. On the contrary, the commission's first annual

In a highly technological society such as ours, no group of people can reasonably exreport which was prepared for pect to progress without a the Federal Office of Educatserious involvement in these helps to make clearer is the abysmal gap that exists in areas. Such an involvement must include not only the teaching of science-related disciplines but also professional pursuit of careers in such areas as computer sciences, aerospace, electrical, petrochemical engineering, biology, chemistry and mathematics.

however, we find an absence of blacks. Yet, these are areas where large numbers of jobs are to be found, even in this day of high black unemployment.

higher education: "There is little diversity in the majors dents. selected by black students." In 1974, for example, 19 per-cent of undergraduates and 50 percent of graduate students chose education as their major fields of study. What has been happening is that an unusually large portion of these students, upon competing undergraduate studies, have been switching over for varying reasons from such fields as business management and the hard sciences to education. Although the report does not make this point, we have known all along that many

Even among technicians,

The committee underlines the historical reality of black