Active Chapter

Man Of The Year

Michael Davis, a UNC-Charlotte student, was recently selected as the "Active Chapter Man of the Year" for the Mid-Eastern Province competition between North Carolina and West Virginia chapters of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity. Davis previously served as Junior Vice Province Polemarch, the highest undergraduate regional office for the Mid-Eastern Province. The active chapters of the fraternity are currently engaged in a statewide tutorial program to aid minority students in coping with standardized tests.

"I felt this was a worthwhile project in lieu of the recently revealed scores of the competency tests in this state," Davis stated. "Therefore, the mission of this project is to help develop academic weaknesses into strengths."

Davis was recently featured on WRET, Channel 36, where he was interviewed by Art Norman on the "Open Up Program." He spoke on the subject of "Positive Fraternity-Community Relationships," an overview of the programs Kappa Alpha Psi active chapters has executed in Charlotte and regional communities.

A junior at UNCC, Davis served as associate attorney general of the student government this year, marking his third year in this position. He has also worked as a part-time instructor in the Older Adults Program at Central Piedmont Community College, where he presently teaches Afro-American studies to older adults.

Davis was the coordinator for the student session of the North Carolina Conference on Black Studies held in Greensboro at A & T State University. The session was entitled "Developing Dual Consciousness in Education."

Commenting on the session, Davis related, "It's important for me to be able to obtain an education that gives me skills to apply in other activities as well as in the community."

As past Junior Vice Province Polemarch and now "Active Chapter Man of the Year" Davis will present a contribution to the NAACP Legal Defense Fund at their annual banquet on May 26.
