

Local Students Receive UNCC

Awards

CHARLOTTE - Eleven Charlotte students received awards at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte's annual Honors and Awards Program April 24.

Kevin Ashley, 4340 Rolling Hill Drive, won two awards. He was named Greek man of the year and won the Student Legislature Humanitarian Award. The Greek award is given in recognition of scholastic achievement, involvement in university organizations and activities and contributions to fraternal ideal of brotherhood. The Student Legislature Award is given to a student who has been recognized for selfless service to humanity.

Michael Lippman, 6014 E. Barrington Drive, won the Kappa Alpha Psi Award. The award is presented to a senior student in the College of Business Administration who has taken three full years of scholastic work at UNCC and has shown superior abilities and performance in his chosen area.

Diane Sorensen, 1132 Linda Lane, received the Charlotte Panhellenic award. This award is given to an exemplary freshman woman standout who is poised and gracious in conduct, able and cooperative in service, and superior in scholarship.

Lani Levine, 1145 Crestbrook Drive, won the Francis M. Fitzgerald Award. Presented by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the award goes to two seniors preparing to enter the teaching profession who have demonstrated in service, and superior and enthusiastic in scholarship and beliefs.

Lesa Moore, 6007D Dove Tree Lane, was named overall Greek woman of the year. This award goes to the most outstanding Greek woman in recognition of significant contributions to the university community.

Cecilia Tart, 200 N. Laurel Ave., won the Media Award for her distinctive contribution to a campus medium, either creative or by service. She is a typesetter for the student newspaper, the yearbook and literary magazine.

Lee O'Hare, 2912 Kilborne Drive, Apt. 7, received the McEniry Award, given to an upperclassman who has demonstrated excellence in the humanities.

Evelyn H. Renfroe, 1754 Edgewater Drive, Arthur B. Smith, 1801 Russell Ave., Charlotte, and Virginia Harbin, Rt. 4, Box 422-H, were named recipients of the James Merritt Award. Presented by the North Carolina Association of Criminal Justice Educators; the award is for the best student papers presented at the organization's annual meeting.

The late Perry Childers of Charlotte was given the James Scott Award posthumously. A student legislature award named in honor of UNCC associate director of admissions, the award goes to the student for outstanding courage and strength displayed in overcoming physical impairment. Childers died in March, 1979.

ESC Officials Say State's Economy Has Tightened

RALEIGH - During the first six months of the 1980 fiscal year, 4.11 North Carolinians registered for jobs at local offices of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission for every job opening the commission received.

During the comparable period of the 1979 fiscal year, there were 3.67 applicants for every job opening received. Commission officials say the increase in the number of applicants per job opening indicates that the state's economy has tightened.

During the first six months of fiscal 1980, 331,160 people registered for jobs at the 89 local and branch Job Service offices in North Carolina, while 315,001 registered during the first half of 1979. But the number of job openings received by the commission fell from 85,853 during the first half of fiscal 1979 to only 78,470 during the first half of this fiscal year, according to statistics compiled by the commission's Bureau of Employment Security Research.

The fact that 16,000 more North Carolinians registered to apply for work while there were 7,000 fewer job openings received during the comparable periods may indicate that people who have not looked for work recently have entered the labor force, said David Garrison, assistant director of the bureau. The figures may mean, for example, that more married women are looking for work to supplement family incomes while their husband are laid off or placed on shorter work weeks he said. At the same time employers may have become more hesitant about filling vacancies because of economic uncertainties Garrison said.

On March 31, 1979, 161,147 people had active job applications on file at Job Service offices, while there were 12,368 unfilled jobs. On March 31, 1980, there were 186,474 active applications and 11,120 unfilled jobs.

The job squeeze appears to have hit all occupations equally, Garrison said. During the comparable six-month periods, the number of registered applicants increased in all nine occupational grouping, while the number of openings listed with Job Service offices fell in eight of the nine groupings.

There were 73,555 registered applicants for clerical and sales occupations during the first half of fiscal 1980, compared to 68,654 registered applicants during the comparable period in the 1979 fiscal year. But the number of clerical and sales openings received by Job Service offices fell from 18,124 to 16,931. The category includes secretaries, clerks, bookkeepers, telephone operators and sales agents and representatives.

The number of registered applicants in service occupations increased from 46,433 to 51,676 during the comparable six-month periods, while the number of listed job openings received declined from 14,734 to 13,659.

In miscellaneous occupations, which include truck and bus drivers, packagers and laborers, the number of registered applicants increased from 39,516 during the first half of fiscal 1979 to 43,444 in the comparable fiscal 1980 period. But job openings received during the six-month periods fell from 11,335 to 9,568.

The number of applicants registering for structural work occupations, which include construction industry jobs, increased from 35,166 to 41,979. But the number of structural work job openings received fell from 14,265 to 12,037.

The only increase in job openings received during the comparable six-month periods was in agriculture, fishery and forestry occupations, the smallest of the nine major occupational
