

At Workshop Here

Cunningham Will Introduce Hair, Skin Care Products

By Susan Ellsworth
Post Staff Writer

An owner of a Birmingham, Alabama, beauty salon and cosmetology school will conduct a workshop here for beauticians on how to use hair care products and techniques.

Joseph Cunningham
Hair styling specialist

He has won over 30 local and national awards and participated in education and application seminars with many leading beauty product manufacturers. Aside from running his business and school, Cunningham tests products for Triad.

Six models will be needed for demonstrating hair cutting, conditioning, relaxing and going from relaxed hair to a cold wave permanent for curly hair.

If you would like to serve as a model contact Eloise Ferguson at 332-5049.

Tickets are available at Hair Original or from Jhirmack distributors for $10 a piece. Lunch is included in the price. The deadline for purchasing tickets is Friday, June 26.

He and three other cosmetologists will show how to use Glytelle deParis, pH 9, a new relaxer that is less harsh on the hair than most cold waves, according to Eloise Ferguson, owner of Hair Original. After the hair is relaxed with Glytelle, he will apply a cold

Triad Products, Inc., and Jhirmack of North Carolina will sponsor the workshop open to barbers as well as beauticians.

Cunningham not only owns Southeastern School of Cosmetology and a beauty salon, but has 20 years experience in styling hair.

Monday, June 22. She worked at Johnson C. Smith for almost 25 years. As personnel officer, she touched the lives of each employee who came aboard to join the JCSU family for many years. She took a sincere interest in the welfare and well being of each employee.

"She was loyal and dedicated and was loved by all her friends at the University," University President Wilbert Greenfield said. "We will miss her friendship and the caliber and quality of work as well as the dedication with which she performed each task. She took great pride in seeing that each task was done with superior quality. As a person, she always cared and was willing to assist others in any way she could."

Mack Davidson, vice president for financial affairs, reflected the sentiments of Dr. Greenfield and the many other alumni, employees and friends of the university.

"She was an outstanding woman," Davidson said. "She was respected by all." As an example of this respect, Davidson said, "Out of all the years she worked here, I've never
