Rev. J. R. Manley's life is built on the foundation of involvement. Whether it has been with the church or the community, Manley has totally committed himself to whatever cause he has believed in.

Born in Murfreesboro, N.C., Manley graduated from Shaw University with A.B. and B.D. degrees. Later he received his Th.M. degree from Duke University. After he completed special work in Hospital Chaplaincy at N.C. Memorial Hospital, Manley studied further at the University of N.C. at Chapel Hill.

Having completed his formal religious training, Manley dabbled in the world of politics. He was the first Black elected to the Chapel Hill-Carrboro School Board. He also was chairman of Chapel Hill's anti-poverty program, past president of the local NAACP chapter, and the local Ministerial Alliance.
