Queen City Men's Club Enjoys Social Activities

Barely a year has passed since the inception of the Queen City Men's Club, but during that time these members have firmly established their club in the local community. The Queen City Men's Club was conceived July 12 1982 when a group of young men with similar ideas and interests in the community decided to execute some of their ideas through the formation of a club. Since the club was started members have aspired to enjoy social activities and provide their services to the communities. Several fundraisers which included tea discos, a raffle drawing, a fish fry and a baseball cap and visor sale have been sponsored by members of the club. During the Christmas season the Queen City Men's Club was able to make a donation to the WGIV Mountain of Food drive.

Because of their commitment to community service the members have decided to donate monies and/or volunteer for at least three fundraising or community activities annually. The Queen City Men's Club represents a unified organization. Each member is elected and held responsible for an office during the year and occasionally you will see club members sporting their personalized maroon and gray jackets, T-shirts and caps. Where they are today is highly reflective of the support they have received from the community and by the community's response and support the Queen City Men's Club is here to stay.

Katharine Johnson Attends Leadership Workshop

Summer is not exclusively the season for leisure and recreation. For Katharine Johnson, a rising ninth grader at Smith Junior High School, means learning how to become a leader.

Ms. Johnson who was recently elected vice-president of the Executive Committee at Smith, along with other class officers and advisor, Inez Davis attended the 24th annual summer leadership workshop sponsored by the North Carolina Association of Student Councils. Designed to help newly-elected students to develop in areas of leadership, officer responsibilities, group activities and relations, the workshop was conducted by director Frances Bounds, and Dr. Ron Jeskel, associate Dean of the Teacher College of the University of Nebraska who served as the keynote speaker and consultant. Approximately 400 delegates through North Carolina attended the workshop. According to Ms. Johnson the leadership workshop was an overwhelming success. "I had a good time; the leadership workshop was a great experience," commented Ms. Johnson. "I learned a lot about the government and the political process," she added. What she learned there she plans to utilize in the upcoming school year. "I'd like to promote people to become leaders, to spark more school spirit and create better student relations. I want to make Smith the best junior high school around," asserted Ms. Johnson.

Fred Feely, Obronia Hudson, James Reynolds, Houston duCille, Ann Graham, and Tyrone Hykes (L-R), returned July 30 from the "Unity in Christ That the World May Believe" conference held in Montreat, N.C. recently. This Southeast Ecumenical Mission Conference explored Biblical understanding of missions; developed leadership skills; demonstrated models which "do justice and love mercy;" and many other activities as well.
