

Cleavon Little (background) makes a dramatic point as Harvey Korman (right) consoles Mel Brooks, in "Blazing Saddles," an outrageous sendup of the American film western in which a black sheriff (Little) sets out to clean up a Western town, Saturday, October 23 at 9 p.m. on WBTV, Channel 3.

Luther Vandross In Great Demand

When singer-songwriter, producer Luther Vandross grew up in the Bronx, he was obsessed with the music of Diana Ross, Aretha Franklin and Dionne Warwick. Now they're returning the obsession. Aretha asked Luther to produce her latest LP—"Jump To It"—which has become her first number one album in five years. Then Diana Ross called Vandross at his New York apartment and asked him to join her in a Manhattan studio to write vocal arrangements and sing backup on an upcoming LP. A few days later Vandross was finishing his own new Epic LP, "Forever, For Always, For Love," at New York's Media Sound Studio when Dionne Warwick dropped in to discuss the possibility of having Luther produce an LP for her in 1983.

"These were the ladies I grew up dreaming about," says Vandross. "Now I just have one more request of life...if I'm dreaming, don't wake me up!"
