Amityville Horror II May Be Offensive To Young People

By Robert Lane
Post Staff Writer

If you thought "Amityville Horror" number one was frightening, wait till you see "Amityville Horror II, The Possession." Actually "Amityville Horror II, The Possession" should be "Amityville Horror I".... Let me explain that.

"Amityville Horror II" is about the first family who lived in the supposedly haunted house. According to the advertisement, the first family wasn't as fortunate as the second. I won't go into any details as to what happened to the first family, but I will tell you that "Amityville Horror II, The Possession" has scenes in it that may be offensive to younger children. The movie is rated R.

The real frightening part about "Amityville Horror" and "Amityville Horror II, The Possession" is the film is based on true-life experiences that allegedly took place in a house said to be possessed by demons. One scene in the movie has the demons coming after the priest but God comes through this time unlike in the first "Amityville Horror," if you remember that particular priest was attacked by flies and later went blind. At the end of "Amityville Horror II, The Possession," the writer leaves us wondering if the priest is actually possessed by the devil.

If you're thinking about reading the book "Amityville Horror II," keep in mind that the book is a continuation from "Amityville Horror I" about the second family. The title of the second movie is "Amityville Horror II, The Possession."

The movie is now showing at the Tryon Mall Theatre.

The Cinema 'N' Draft-house is probably the newest thing to hit Charlotte since Pac Man fever. The movie theatre and lounge, all wrapped into one, is a concept that is sure to be—and has been—accepted by Charlotte's movie crowd. While watching a movie the audience also enjoys the
