Rev. Jesse Jackson recently sent out a statement concerning Dr. A. Romeo Horton's resignation as President and Chief Executive Officer of the PUSH International Trade Bureau.

"It is with a note of sadness that we announce the decision," Jackson wrote, "but because of Dr. Horton's health condition, he was advised by his doctors to cut down on his workload."

However, Dr. Horton has agreed to assist the Trade Bureau and Operation

PUSH should they need his experience and expertise in the future.

Joseph Gardner, Chief Operating Officer of Operation PUSH, has assumed interim responsibility for the administration of the Trade Bureau until a successor to Dr. Horton is named.

"Brothers-Black Soldiers in the Nam" a book authored by Stanley Foff and Robert Sanders with Clark Smith, is a book reflecting Black soldiers in Vietnam. A different twist from the ordinary Vietnam write-up during the war and civilian life because it features two black men contrasting their existence.

"Brothers" began as a part of a Vietnam Veteran's Oral History project. Clark Smith, a former professor at U.C. Berkeley aided the book "Brothers" to come into existence.

Featured in the book are Stanley Goff and Robert Sanders. Goff won the Distinguished Service Cross for bravery under fire. Sanders earned the Air Medal for more than 25 combat assaults. In simple unvarnished direct and forecul language, both of these men tell what it was like to fight when they did not understand what they were fighting for and why in the midst of fear and loneliness most men felt an overwhelming feeling of brotherhood.
