First Citizen Awards 27 With Service Pins

Twenty-seven First Citizens employees in Charlotte have been recognized for their service to the bank and its customers.

Howard F. Rhinehardt received a 25-year pin.

Receiving 20-year pins were John R. Noles, Annemarie J. Atwell and Thelma B. Renegar.

Pins designating 15 years of service went to David R. Ellsworth, William A. Fisher and Julia R. Richardson.

Receiving 10-year pins were Ted R. Griffith, Cathyrine N. Hyman, Tony M. Yarboro, Pamela Dickerson, Alexander S. Badger, Jr., Fred E. St. John, Joseph G. Quidley, Robert Gravitt, Jr., Elva Wensil and Linda H. Butler.

Pins for five years of service went to Bonnie F. Simpson, Harriet I. Bryant, Donna R. Ledford, Mary L. Hinton, Gayle T. Hall, Brenda A. Fields, Elizabeth K. Handsel, Kelly J. Burnette, Mary Sue Welch and Linda R. Stinson.

Alexander Blames Blacks

general operations. Hooks "dirty, low-down lie."

Alexander commented that, "If the organization needed money for general operations, it could be obtained through the organization's reserve or by the vote of the board of directors."

Alexander emphatically stated he wasn't disturbed by questioning about the NAACP. He blamed the organization's financial problems on blacks in general, rather than NAACP leaders. "Some of the blacks being assisted by the NAACP never contribute money," he projected. "It's not just the NAACP that blacks don't support," Alexander added. He said, "...black historical programs in general receive little support. A hypothetical example is black colleges," he stated. "The support of black colleges by black people is minimal."

Alexander summed up his point when he stated more people need to be asking what have they done to support the NAACP. "Then they'll know why this 75 year-old organization is having money problems," he assured.

Open Jumpers

The 1984 Mercedes U.S. Open Jumping Championship, featuring 30 of America's strongest horses and riders, will be held on Sunday, May 13, at Memorial Stadium. The jumping event, one of the last stops before the 1984 Olympic Games in L.A., will be held at 2:30 p.m. and preceded at 10 a.m. by Charlotte's own equestrian event, the Charlotte Junior-Amateur Championship. For ticket information, call 366-4028 or 364-6055. Lions Charities, Inc. sponsors the event to benefit charities supported by the Lions.
