Last year's mink coat winner in the Church Woman of the Year Contest has thrown her hat in the ring again. Mattie Caldwell, of Ebenezer Baptist Church, intends to do even better this year.

"I'm going to contact more people and do a little more talking," the 3-time contestant stated. Ms. Caldwell exuded confidence. When discussing the possibility of becoming this year's grand prize winner, she proclaimed, "That's what I intend to be!"

The energetic church woman is very involved at Ebenezer. A life-time member, Ms. Caldwell is a trustee, the Young Adult Missionary Director, Program Director for the Floral Club, a member of the Pastor's Aides, and co-leader of Senior Missionary Group No. 3. She also serves on the Budget and Finance Committee of the church.

Ms. Caldwell described herself as "a Post fan." It runs in the family. Her mother used to write for the Post and her daughter was a secretary at the paper. Her past experiences as a contestant for Church

Woman of the Year have been "wonderful. I've met a lot of new acquaintances and helped get the Post in a lot of homes that ordinarily would not have received it."

Ms. Caldwell's family is supportive of her efforts. She thinks her church looks forward to the contest, too, and expects even more support from the congregation this year. The Rev. A.B. Sutton, "a fine minister" in Ms. Caldwell's words, was delighted that she agreed to participate again.
