Your Daughter Has Right To Choose Clothes She Wears

Dear Carole:

Our daughter, age 18, has started jogging to keep in shape. You wouldn't think that jogging is a problem. But it is right now for us. You see, we don't approve of the outfit she wears. We think she has too much skin hanging out. She says that she has to wear something short and loose so she can run freely. She also says that we have no right to tell her what to wear since she is now 18. Which of us do you think is right?

"Loving Parents"

Dear Loving Parents:

Both of you. As an 18 year old adult, your daughter does have the right to choose the clothes she wears. She must decide how she wants to look. Her appearance must be acceptable to her. Your concern, though, as loving parents is understandable, too. There are jogging outfits which are somewhat modest. Maybe you can gently suggest that she try an outfit a size larger or one that is less revealing in style. However, although your opinion may be expressed to her, she does not have to make decisions based on your approval.

One of the many challenges of being a parent is learning to live with the decisions and choices that children will make; especially as they reach adulthood.

Carole

Dear Carole:

My husband is a very good looking man. That doesn't really bother me because I'm a very good looking woman. The problem is that many women flirt with him. Now, I have talked to him about this. But he says he doesn't think they are flirting. I think he's too blind to be able to tell if they are. I also think that he likes the attention and doesn't want me to know it. I don't understand him. Because I give him all the attention he needs. My thought is that a woman can tell when another woman is flirting easier than a man can tell. I don't think that my husband is as dumb as he's acting. How can I get him to see that these women are flirting with him? How can I make them stop?

E.J.

Dear E. J.:

Although you stated that you aren't bothered by your husband's good looks, it sounds as though you are. If your husband is good looking, then someone else will notice that he is, too. If you could feel more secure in your relationship with him, your concerns would be less. Neither you nor he has control over how other people look at him. However, he has control over how he reacts to those looks. And you have control over how you interpret those looks. If you feel that you are giving your husband the attention he needs, then you have little to worry about. But, be sure that he gives you the attention that is also important to you.

WPCQ-TV Begins 'Hot' New Program

Get ready to get "HOT" with today's brightest musical stars, like Michael Jackson, Olivia Newton-John, Lionel Richie, Culture Club and others when WPCQ-TV, Channel 36, rocks in a new, daily music video program.

Channel 36 will broadcast "HOT" 11-11:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, beginning June 11.

Hosted by Claud Mann, "HOT" is an exciting series offering the latest in music videos, plus "HOT" news items and rock and roll trivia. There will be sizzling "HOT" showcases featuring performers like the Police, Duran Duran, Billy Joel, Elton John and the Rolling Stones.

Each week a nationwide viewer poll will determine the top 30 videos, which will be counted down starting on Monday. A "Pick of the Day" will be included on each show as well.

An actor-musician, Mann will introduce each video as well as offer the "HOT" news items and rock trivia. His boyish charm, personal pizzazz and knowledge of the music business will provide a fresh appeal to rock video fans.

Bob Banner noted for producing some of the most entertaining shows today -- "Solid Gold" and "Star Search" -- adds his production touch to "HOT," airing across the country. Nothing in the entertainment field is hotter than music videos. And nothing on television is hotter than "HOT."
