Dr. Davis Opens Private Practice

By Jalyne Strong
Post Staff Writer

This week Dr. Gwyn Davis hangs out her shingle denoting the establishment of her Private Practice in General dentistry.

Her new office is located at 1012 S. Kings Dr., suite 206. In solo practice, Dr. Davis runs the office with assistant, Susan Watts.

A native of High Point, N.C., Davis received her BS in Biology from A&T University. She earned a Medical Technologist degree at Deaconess Hospital in Detroit, MI., and later graduated from Tuft's School of Dental Medicine in Boston, Mass., receiving her DMD (Degree in Dental Medicine).

Prior to opening private practice, Dr. Davis had completed a one year residency at Charlotte Memorial Hospital. She's worked with the Central Piedmont Community College Dental Clinic where she taught dental assisting and dental hygiene and was subsequently employed as an associate dentist with Dr. Murphy in the Independence Plaza.

"I'm elated," assures Dr. Davis concerning the opening of her office. She surmised that all previous experience allowed her to get "a feel for the difference between working for an institution and private practice." Dr. Davis claims, though she had not always planned to open a private practice it eventually appeared as an appropriate direction in which to go.

Aside from family dentistry and general dentistry, Dr. Davis projects she looks forward to doing cosmetic dentistry which involves the newly developed process of bonding. "It's unbelievable the things that can be done with bonding," asserts Davis. As opposed to other methods such as crowns and bridges, she explains, "Bonding is better looking, less expensive and no anesthesia is necessary."

Another addition to Dr. Davis' practice is that her assistant, Watts, is skilled in sign language making it possible for Dr. Davis to successfully treat the hearing impaired. "Deaf people have had problems with dentists because they could not relate what their problem was," explains Dr. Davis and she hopes to amend this situation with the aid of her assistant.

lates, opened inside Latta Arcade on April 2. "Construction was already under way when we moved," said Brenda Smith, one of the owners, adding that she has no basis for comparison. However, Smith does not believe present construction is having an adverse effect on business. "We have a growing clientele," she remarked, "and we expect business will further increase when construction ends."

Next Week: Director of Charlotte Uptown Development Corp. says transit mall will bring people back into the streets.

Fourth Street To Close September

Due to construction of the Tryon Street Mall, Fourth Street between College and Church Streets will be closed on September 13. Inbound traffic on Fourth Street should use Second and Sixth Streets as alternatives.

Also beginning September 13, Charlotte Transit express bus stops and routes will change due to the Fourth Street closing. The express stop at the corner of College and Fourth Streets will be closed. Express buses may be boarded on College Street between Second and Third Streets or on Church Street between Third and Fourth Streets.

Routes and stops for local buses will not change.

For information on changes in bus stops and routes, watch for signs at existing bus stops to tell where and when each stop will be moved. Watch for signs at new bus stops. Watch for notice of change on the Rider's Reports posted in buses. Watch for the special section about the Tryon Street Mall in the Charlotte Observer every two weeks. Call Transit information at 336-3366.
