

Hoopla At The Marriott City Center

Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt (r) listens to Caesar Wallace, special marketing manager for Coca-Cola. Guest

"Pop" Leroy Miller, former principal at East Mecklenburg, can be seen in background.

Participants and guests at the Coke-sponsored retailers' breakfast include l. to r., Johnson C. Smith vice president, Mack Davidson; Frank Harrison, sales manager for Coca-Cola Consolidated; and retailer, Willie Wadell.

Marvin Gelfin, president of Coca-Cola Consolidated, engages in conversation with Dr. Robert Albright, president of Johnson C. Smith University.

Coca-Cola's Caesar Wallace chats amiably with the Rev. Bob Walton, County Commissioner. Other guests at the breakfast sponsored by Coke in conjunction with the company's black history month promotion include Dr. Gloria Duval, vice president for development at JCSU, and Dr. Emery Rann, member of the board of trustees at the university.

Wallace Paysour (r), owner of Paysour's Supermarket, gestures to someone at Coca-Cola's breakfast at the Marriott on February 14. The breakfast was a salute from Coke to retail dealers for their support during the black history promotion. In the background, Jim Jardins (l.) southern region sales manager for Coca-Cola, and Sandy McDonalson, also with Coca-Cola, engage in discussion with Chris Starnes and an unidentified guest.

Jayne Kennedy wasn't the only attraction at the Marriott. Bob Walton, county commissioner was magnetically drawn to the aroma of the food.