Opinions At West Charlotte High

What Makes A "Good" Leader?

While not everyone assumes leadership roles and responsibilities, every individual is a potential leader and may someday find him- or herself in circumstances that call for leadership skills.

Since today's young people will be the leaders of tomorrow's world, we asked students at West Charlotte High School, "What makes a good leader?" Their answers, while varied, had some common core characteristics like honesty, responsibility, and assertiveness.

MONIQUE PATTERSON, a sophomore from Wynbrook Way, described a good leader this way: "They should be able to get along with other people, like to do things for others, and be attentive to things. They show they can do anything they put their minds to. They're dependable."

ANTONIO NEELY, a Columbus Circle resident and a senior, suggested that a leader is "a person who is willing to take responsibility." A leader, according to Neely, is neutral, "can speak their piece, talk in front of people, and not be afraid to be forward with their feelings."

ROSALIND HENDERSON, a Vickery Drive senior, called a leader "a person who can express him- or herself and stick to what he says, does not take sides, strives for balance, pits out alternatives, and lets you decide. A leader is friendly, but not so friendly that others run over him. Leaders aren't bossy. They have the responsibility to make sure everything goes right."

PATRICIA SOULE, a twelfth grader from Castleton Road, described a leader as "someone who's honest, who stands up for their rights and other people's, too. A leader isn't scared to speak in front of other people."

SAMANTHA ORLANDO, a senior who lives on Dalecrest Drive, declared that a leader is "one who is very understanding and caring. A leader helps others learn. Leaders are dependable and are there to help. They're friendly but they also are managers. A leader is able to get along with others and understand others' needs and feelings."

CATHE DUNKERTON lives on Marlbrook Drive and is in the twelfth grade. According to her, a leader is "dependable and responsible. Leaders show a liking for others no matter where they are; they are caring toward others no matter what their appearance may be." She concluded with, "Leaders are honest, trustworthy, not afraid to express their opinions, very open, and present a good aura about themselves."

Community Club To Sponsor Disco

The Bridlewood Community Club will sponsor a disco to raise money for scholarships March 30 at the Ramesses Temple No. 51, 119 8th St. Admission is $3 and the fundraiser will be held from 9 until.

The Bridlewood Community Club has been instrumental in assisting the residents of the Bridlewood neighborhood in various ways.

Street lights have been erected, a crime watch instigated and the members visit the sick and shut in as well as give comfort to neighbors who have had death in the family.

Caring for individuals extends beyond the neighborhood boundaries as well. The five-year-old organization has also visited and aided individuals in rest homes and sponsored a thanksgiving dinner for a needy family. The 12 member group is also in the process of aiding a young child who is paralyzed by raising money to build a ramp at his home.

The affair planned for March 30 will benefit a scholarship fund for youngsters planning to attend college according to the Bridlewood Community Clubs' president Maxine Eves. Last year scholarships were presented as well.

The group is looking forward to several other activities such as neighborhood picnics and other special gatherings.
