

Pick A Personalized Fragrance From A Delicious New Bouquet Of Florals

As spring produces its own exhilarating floral spectacle, fragrances based on flower essences provide a delicious wardrobe of scents to complement spring and summer fashion. The lush aromas of florals enliven the spirit, so why not find one or two that suit your temperament and wear them throughout the season?

In the Victorian era, women enjoyed floral fragrances by carrying nosegays. The small bouquets were usually made of highly fragranced mixed flowers. Each woman had her own favorite mix, which became, in a way, her fragrance trademark.

Revlon recently re-introduced this concept with a trio of floral fragrances called Fleurs de Jontue. Taken from the "garden" of the popular Jontue fragrance, each new scent is a complex compound based on a single floral note: Rose, iris or lotus.

The rose is the flower most associated with romance, perhaps because in Roman times the rose belonged to Venus, the goddess of love.

Fleur de Jontue's Rose de Mai fragrance captures the romantic mood of roses at their aromatic peak in the month of May. This kind of fragrance suits a woman who thinks with her heart. It has an understated but very definite allure.

For the free-spirited (or one who feels that way on a sunny spring day), the scent of iris fits the mood. Irid de Fete is the fragrance based on this flower essence, and it's melded with fruity-floral notes.

This is a fresh, kick-up-your-heels fragrance -- perhaps because the iris is associated with the Greek messenger goddess of the same name. She was said to own the rainbow and is associated with a footloose nature that is highly communicative. This kind of woman is apt to appreciate colorful things around her.

The most exotic member of this floral trio is Lotus de Nuit -- a rich blend of Oriental notes that are stronger, more lingering and meant for attraction.

This is a fragrance for a woman whom men find irresistible--or a woman who wants this to be so.

The essence of the lotus blossom is blended sensually with the orange flower and other florals, plus woody notes and sultry musk to create a fragrance that encourages every woman to fulfill her fantasies.

If no one of these moods or attitudes predominates, you are a woman who loves variety. Perhaps all three of the Fleurs de Jontue garden will comprise your spring bouquet fragrance.

Looking unique is the "in" thing this season. Finding what's suitable for one's own personality is not quite as easy as it sounds. But for Sarena Mobley, a freshman computer science wix at Johnson C. Smith University, the innocent, yet charming look suits her fine. Above the Charlotte native models a black semi mini skirt with a double-breasted jacket.
