

April E. Cousart
.....A principal scholar

April Cousart Earns
JEDL-WEN WENCO Scholarship

April E. Cousart, daughter of Samuel R. and Helen E. Cousart, 310 S. Ramsey St., Charlotte, has been awarded the $1,000 JEDL-WEN, WENCO Foundation Scholarship at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

The one-year scholarship is intended to help a new student get started in college. Awarded to an incoming freshman, the criteria includes academic achievement, and the recipient must be from a community in which a JEDL-WEN or WENCO plant is located.

A senior at Harding High, Cousart ranks sixth academically in a class of 249. She plans to major in engineering at UNCC.

At Harding, she is a member of the marching band, Keylites, Spanish Club, Beta Club and Science Club. She was selected senior girl to attend the 100 Senior Women Leadership Conference in 1984. An honor roll student and member of the newspaper staff, she was nominated for the top senior in 1985. She is a Principal Scholar. She also is a member of the NAACP and was archonette for the Zeta Phi Beta Sorority Inc.

250 Receive Degrees

During the commencement exercises at Winston-Salem State University on May 19, approximately 250 seniors received bachelor's degrees. Marva Collins, noted educator and founder of the Westside Preparatory School in Chicago, delivered the keynote address. Afterwards, the university presented a citation in recognition of outstanding contributions to Collins for her work in education.

Winston-Salem graduates from the Charlotte area, along with their respective majors, are as follows: Michael D. Baker, Magna Cum Laude graduate in Business Administration; Johanna Alexander, Business Administration; Gilbert L. Forest Jr., Business Administration; Sandra E. Ervin, Business Administration; Norma J. McIlwain, Cum Laude graduate in Urban Administration; Ralph McKnight, Business Administration; Greta E. Miller, Business Administration; Robert L. Neal, Art; Paulette D. Scott, Business Administration; Darryl L. Sigler, Business Administration; Mozell A. Thomas, Office Administration; and Michael A. Welch, Business Administration.

Juneteenth

uled for the evening, along with the full court of the Juneteenth King and Queen.

Special guest, Bob Law, of Night Talk (which is heard on WGIV), will be in town on June 21 and 22.

Other events planned as part of the Juneteenth Celebration include a cornrow contest and a highlight of fashion, featuring African attire, the dress of famous blacks, and clothing of the slavery period. Local seamstresses are being recruited to help in this endeavor.

Anyone interested in helping with this year's Juneteenth—whether as seamstress, talent, or in any other capacity—is urged to call 374-0557 or 392-8740.

Reginald L. Woods

Navy Seaman Reginald L. Woods, son of Robert L. and Zada L. Woods of 3317 West Blvd., recently returned from a six-month deployment to the Western Pacific.

He is currently serving as a member aboard the tank landing ship USS Tuscaloosa, homeported in San Diego.

Woods' ship took part in several major training and combined arms exercises and logged over 23,000 nautical miles during the journey.

Education Group Places Emphasis On Minority Enrollment

Special To The Post
Santa Monica, Ca. - A program to address the decline in minority participation in management education has been announced by an association of the nation's leading graduate business and management schools. The three-year, nationwide effort by the Graduate Management Admission Council (GMAC) will include development of new institutional programs and a communications campaign for potential minority graduate management students. According to the GMAC, minority enrollment in graduate management education programs increased dramatically during the 1970s, with a peak 50 percent increase between 1974 and 1976. Figures for the period from 1980 to 1982, however, show a five percent decline in minority enrollment. "Over the past several years there has been a continuing decline in the number of minority students applying for admission and actually completing MBA programs," said William Broesamle, GMAC president. "This trend has significant consequences for the structure and composition of our nation's businesses and other institutions." The GMAC is a non-profit organization of 75 schools which provides information to all graduate business and management schools and prospective students to help both make reasoned choices in the admission process. It sponsors the Graduate Management Admission Test (GMAT) and also provides a forum for the exchange of information through research, educational programs and other services among the broad constituency of individuals and institutions concerned with management education. In 1983 the GMAC convened a special Task Force to Increase Minority Participation in Graduate Management Education. The task force recommendations form the elements of the new campaign. The GMAC campaign includes additional research to identify the causes of the decline in minority enrollments, programs to strengthen institutional commitments to admitting more minority students, and a comprehensive communications program.
