Apostle Adams, a former pastor of the Mother House Of Prayer seems pleased at the progress that the Food Bank

This gentleman and the young man accompanying him are just two of the beneficiaries of the House Of Prayer's Food Bank. For them and others like them it's a good feeling to know that a church in the community cares. (Photo by Bernard Reeves)

There's a good reason why there's so many people in this one area. They're benefiting from the House of Prayer Food Bank. This missionary effort extends to all of the states where there is a House of Prayer. (Photo by Bernard Reeves)

Essie Bryant (at right) has a large responsibility. She is in charge of the Food Bank committee. Three days a week, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, the doors of the House of Prayer are opened to its own members and the community at large to receive loaves of bread. (Photo by Bernard Reeves)

Although the members of the House of Prayer can't totally wipe out the hunger problem, they're certainly doing their share as seen above. The Food Bank committee seeks to serve the needy. (Photo by Bernard Reeves)
