N. C. Central Campaigns To Raise $16 Million

Special To The Post . Durham - Fifteen years before the 21st century begins, North Carolina Central University has launched a campaign to raise a total of more than $16 million in the next eight years.

Chancellor LeRoy T. Walker announced the campaign in a convocation last week which marked the end of the university's Diamond Anniversary Year. North Carolina Central University was founded in 1910 as the National Religious Training School and Chautauqua.

The first of two phases of the campaign has begun, and will end in 1988. Of the $5.4 million goal for the first phase of the drive, Walker announced this morning, the university has in hand $2.8 million in gifts and pledges.

The second phase of the drive will be launched in 1988, with a goal of $10.8 million. The total goal for the campaign is thus $16.2 million. A substantial portion of the total will be invested for endowment purposes, and the university expects to have an endowment fund of more than $15 million by its 100th birthday in 2010.

During the first three-year phase of the campaign, NCCU will seek to achieve a total of $1,100,000 in Annual Giving, $1 million for specific support of new and existing university programs, and $3.3 million for endowment.

The second-phase campaign will seek, over five years, a total of $2,759,000 in Annual Giving, $1,- 875,000 for program support, and $6,150,000 for endowment investment.

The funds raised in Annual Giving campaigns will be used for unrestricted student scholarships, graduate fellowships, and teaching assistantships; to establish a student loan fund; and for faculty and administrative operating budget support.

Program support funds will be used to expand NCCU's honors program, to establish a strong visiting lecturer and artist series, to support the NCCU Museum of Art, to increase library holdings, enhance research programs, support faculty development and to improve other university services. Income from the endowment funds would also provide for program support and scholarships, in addition to providing supplemental funding for faculty salaries.

The campaign will be managed by the North Carolina Central University Foundation, Inc., the university's principal fund raising arm. William E. Simon, former U.S. Secretary of the Treasury, will serve as honorary chairman for the campaign, and Dr. Francis A. Kornegay of Detroit will serve as campaign committee chairman.

Hearts

Six hours. That's the time a heart attack victim has before damage is irreversible.

The generous gift from the Belk Family establishes the Belk Heart Center as a regional facility with some of the most sophisticated technology in the world for open heart surgery and the complex, delicate heart catheterization procedures.

Presbyterian's spacious Psychiatric Center is the only one of its type in the Charlotte area that is a part of a full service hospital.

It's a place where shaping potter's clay helps reshape troubled spirits. Where a rooftop greenhouse nurtures new ideas about living in a complex world. A place where staff and patients form a living, working community that leads to recovery.

Handsome new facilities—a basketball court and running track, a private dining room, a greenhouse, a pottery-kiln area and generous areas for group therapy—support the programs designed by individual physicians.

Babies

Birthing rooms in soft dusty rose with a rocker for mom, a recliner for dad, an adjustable bed with a quilted spread and a brass quilt stand.

State-of-the-art equipment in an attractive. home-like atmosphere, with staff who wants to accommodate our new moms' and dads' wishes. A series of programs that encourage participation.

And down the hall, the Intensive Care Nursery for babies who need special care.
