Marguerite Howie To Receive Top Scientist Award

Orangeburg - Marguerite Rogers Howie, professor of sociology and a principal investigator of 1990 Research at South Carolina State College, has been awarded the Morrison and Evans Outstanding Scientist Award by the Association of Research Directors of 1890 Colleges and Universities. The award was presented at the organization's 10th annual symposium held recently in Atlanta.

The first woman recipient of the association's highest honor, Mrs. Howie was selected from a field of nominees representing 17 historically black land-grant institutions from 18 Southern states. The award is presented annually to an outstanding scientist and educator who has demonstrated national leadership in a field of agriculturally-related research. As a rural sociologist, her research has had its major impact on human resource development and improving the quality of life of people in the South.

A native of Wilmington, N.C., professor Howie received her professional educational training at Shaw University in Raleigh, and her professional education at Atlanta, Boston, and Duke Universities, Universities of Wisconsin, South Carolina and the University of Ghana. Her multi-disciplinary areas of study encompass sociology, social foundations, gerontology, guidance and cultural anthropology. Mrs. Howie joined the faculty of South Carolina State College in 1957. After 15 years, she continues to serve as a model teacher for undergraduate students in the Department of Behavioral Sciences of that institution.

As a dedicated and respected researcher, on the state, regional, and national levels, Mrs. Howie has written and or presented a combination of more than 60 articles, papers and bulletins. She has conducted research in areas such as Foundations for Self-Determination; In-Migration and Its Effect on the Quality of Life; Communication and Transportation Effects on Utilization of Community Agencies-Resources; and A Use of Knowledgeables in Rural Research.

Her excellent grantmanship skills are reflected in the acquisition of funds in excess of $1 million from the Kellogg Foundation to develop the Department of Social Sciences at South Carolina State College and from the United States Department of Agriculture for the implementation of state and regional projects.

Mrs. Howie is an active member of the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History, Association of Social and Behavioral Sciences, Rural Sociological Society, and Southern Sociological Society. She has served as a consultant with numerous agencies and commission including the South Carolina Commission on Aging; Pre-Retirement Council; South Carolina Caucus on Black Aging; South Carolina Council for Social Studies; Human Relations and Social Welfare Forum; Commission on the Future of the South; and the Governor's Consultation on Rural Needs.

Each year since 1982, professor Howie has been awarded a Distinguished Faculty Endowed Chair at South Carolina State College. In 1984, she received the W.E.B. DuBois Award from the Association of Social and Behavioral Scientists.

As this year's recipient of the Outstanding Scientist Award, the Association of Research Directors presented Mrs. Howie with a commemorative plaque and a cash award of $1,000.
