

King's "Free At Last" Speech Available

Tribune Entertainment Company announced that "Free At Last," a two-hour, musical tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., is available for airing this month. Tribune Entertainment is representing the show for station clearances and media sales.

"We are proud to be offering this timely commemorative special on Dr. King as his birthday will be celebrated as a national holiday for the first time on January 20," said William Kunkel, Vice President, Marketing and Sales for Tribune Entertainment.

LaVar Burton, star of the award-winning "Roots" television series, will serve as host for "Free At Last." Highlights will include segments by internationally known storyteller and folk singer, Ella Jenkins, a performance by the Black Street Puppet Theater and participation by choirs and schools from across the country that are named after Dr. King.

"Free At Last" was produced by Tribune Central City Productions whose programs are syndicated and distributed nationally by Tribune Entertainment Company.

Tribune Entertainment Company, a subsidiary of Tribune Broadcasting Company, Inc., acquires, develops, produces and distributes television programming nationally.
