Sullivan Principles Under Attack

Special To The Post

The Sullivan Principles, a voluntary code of corporate conduct for U.S. companies operating in South Africa, are being sharply criticized by many antiapartheid activists who believe the Principles will lead to continued corporate involvement in the exploitive economic system of South Africa.

Rev. Leon H. Sullivan, a Philadelphia Baptist minister, introduced his Principles in March, 1977, in an effort to curb corporate discrimination in South Africa, reports the January issue of Black Enterprise magazine. The code calls for complete desegregation in the work place, equal employment practices and equal pay for all employees, training programs for and an increase in the number of nonwhites in management and supervisory positions, and aid in improving housing, education, and health care for nonwhites.

The Principles have been praised by President Reagan and adopted by 128 of the 350 U.S. companies currently operating in South Africa. Only 32 out of those 128, however, have received the highest "making good progress" rating by the consulting firm which monitors compliance.

Critics, both in the United States and South Africa, claim that the Principles help entrench the apartheid system and argue that U.S. companies should withdraw completely from the racist country until apartheid is ended.

"The same companies that sign the Principles call the police on our

Endangered Species

Mecklenburg County Park and Recreation Department will sponsor a workshop on "Threatened & Endangered Species - Their Past, Present and Future," on Saturday, January 25, at 2 p.m. Park Ranger Doug Glover will conduct an informative look at the status of threatened and endangered wildlife species in North Carolina and nationwide. The workshop is free and for all ages. Meet in the Visitor Center. Call Latta Plantation Park at 875-1391 for more information.

people (when they demand) higher wages," Godfrey Sithole, an exiled South African living in Philadelphia, told Black Enterprise.

Rev. Sullivan stresses that the measures are not a complete solution but rather a peaceful complement to other antiapartheid efforts.

Winter Walk

The Mecklenburg County Park and Recreation Department will sponsor a "Winter Walk" at McDowell Park on Highway 49 South, Saturday, January 25, at 10 a.m.

The free hike will be a guided tour through the wintery woods. Join the Park Naturalist on a walk to the wood duck cove to observe signs of wildlife and identify trees and winter's wildflowers. Meet at the Nature Center.

"The Principles alone are not the solution to apartheid," he explains, "but they are a pick and hammer to put cracks in the wall of apartheid."

The January issue of Black Enterprise is available on newsstands or by sending $1.95 plus $1.00 postage to the publisher, 130 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10011.

Belk To Present 1986

Belk Bridal Fashion Show

Belk proudly presents "Just For You Two," the 1986 Belk Bridal Fashion Show. The Bridal Show takes place on Saturday, January 25, at 2 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom of the Radisson Plaza Hotel, Charlotte. Pamela McAuley, Belk Fashion Director, has created a beautiful showing of all the latest styles for brides, grooms, bridesmaids, ushers and mothers - every member of the wedding party.

Prior to the show, you may enjoy the music of the Carolina Brass Ensemble. Brides-to-be will register to win one of several exciting door prizes: rehearsal dinner for 25 at the Radisson; complementary tuxedo rental for Mitchell's Formalwear; complementary limousine service from Bush Limousine; beauty products from Estee Lauder; a wedding cake from Baker's Unlimited-Glorious Cuisine and much, much more. One lucky bride-to-be will be the winner of the Grand Prize Give-away: a honeymoon trip for two to Orlando, Florida, complete with airfare from Eastern Airlines.

Following the show, the Radisson Plaza Hotel and Baker's Unlimited-Glorious Cuisine will host a complementary cake and champagne reception in the area adjacent to the Ballroom. Numerous vignettes will be located throughout the reception area highlighting the Belk Bridal Services.

Join us for this very special show which caters to that very special person - the new bride.
