McCormick Illuminates Talents Of JCSU Squad

Ricky McCormick is a native of Fairmont, North Carolina, where he attended Fairmont High School. "Slick" is a business and marketing major at Johnson C. Smith University who is moving into his own as the point guard.

He had 10 assists against Shaw in a game which the Bulls lost, 101-88, and 12 in a 112-78 win over Livingstone.

In high school, he was All Conference, All Roberson County and honorable mention for All State.

Playing back-up guard to James Shockley last year, he averaged only 2 points per game but shot 74 percent from the line.

McCormick is a 5'10", 170 pounder who said that he is enjoying his role as point guard and is ready for the challenge of leading the team.

"We have a lot of talent on this squad and I believe that my role as point guard is to illuminate this talent and to let it shine as we win our games and hopefully advance to the NCAA playoffs at the end of the season," he added.

McCormick can also throw the ball up in addition to dishing it out.

He has the season high of assists in a ball game with his 12 which is only two off a record set in 1982 by Phil Flores.

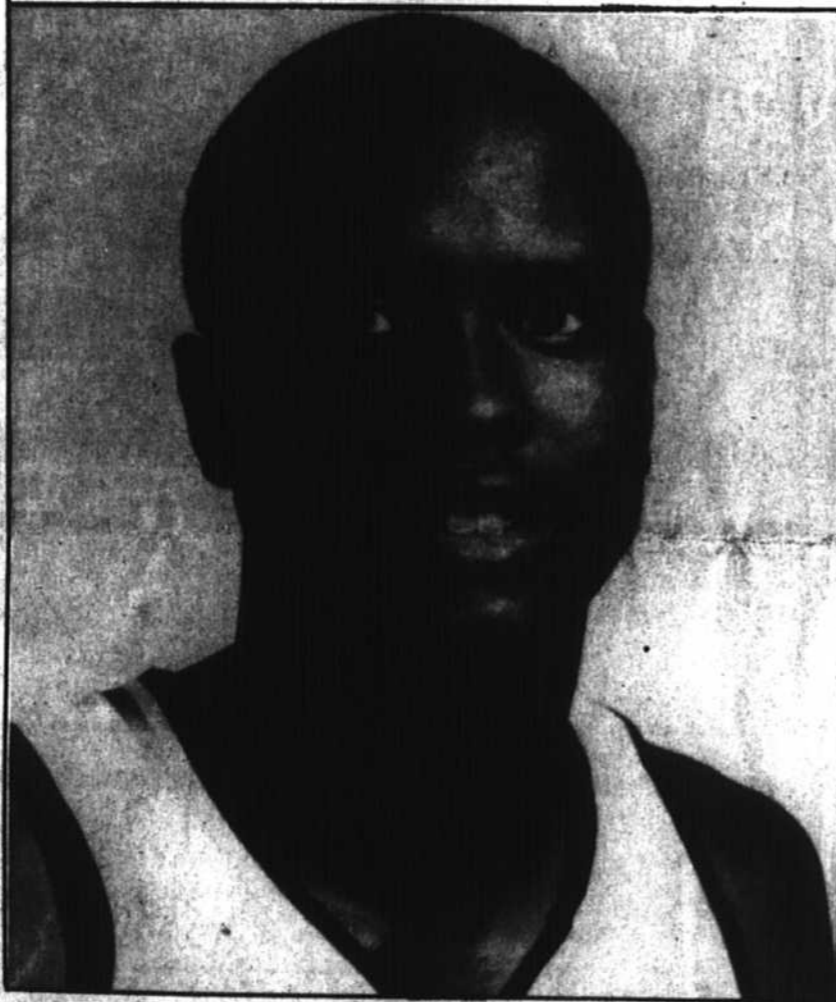

He also has three steals in three different ball games.

In addition to setting his own team up, he plays good defense.

McCormick is averaging 5.6 points per game while shooting 50% from the line and 85% from the free throw line.

He is averaging 2.2 rebounds per game and 4.7 assists per game to make him sixth in the Central Intercollegiate Conference in that category.

The Golden Bulls play at St. Augustine's tonight (Thursday) and travel to Bowie State on Saturday for two key CIAA match-ups.

Reggie Barnes

Barnes Has Career High During Tournament

Reggie Barnes, is a 6'4" sophomore guard/forward from Smithfield Selma High School in Smithfield, N.C.

The business major is the son of Mrs. Carolyn Barnes who picked UNCC over South Florida and Maryland.

During his freshman year, he started in 50% of his team's games and one of his proudest moments came when he nailed the game-winning basket, a 20-footer with 37 seconds remaining on the clock to help the 49ers beat San Diego State, 77-76.

That game winner came on his birthday, December 28, 1985.

In 15 Sun Belt Conference games, he hit a career high of 12 against Old Dominion.

Barnes is expected to really help the 49er program.

In high school, he averaged 21.6 points per game as a senior and 21.5 points as a junior.

He was honored as the Capital 8 "Player of the Year" and the Metro Region "Player of the Year" at the conclusion of his senior year.

He was Greensboro Daily News All East, Raleigh News and Observer All East and Greensboro News and Record All State.

He represented Smithfield at the East-West Basketball All-Star game in Greensboro two summers ago.

The 49ers have Jacksonville (tonight) at the Coliseum and Wofford on Saturday.

On Wednesday, the team travels to South Alabama in Mobile for a Sun Belt Conference game.

Perry Announces January Football Additions

HICKORY. With the recruiting season in full swing, Lenoir-Rhyne head football coach John Perry has announced a number of transfers who have joined the Bears' squad for next year.

"We are happy to have these new players in this semester," said Perry. "Working towards improvement is a continuous process and we feel these young men can help our team."

The transfers include a couple of NCAA Division I players and two other players with college experience.

Bob Lofton, a 6'2", 215-pound linebacker, comes to L-R from Auburn University. Lofton is a native of Gainesville, GA, and East Hall High School.

Randolph Bowers, a 5'0", 200-pound running back, comes to the Bears from the University of North Carolina and Chapin High School in Chapin, SC.

Also added to the roster are wide receiver Scott Walker of Vernon, AL, and Livingston University, and defensive lineman Scott Drye, a native of Salisbury, NC, transferring from Lees-McRae Junior College. Walker is 5'9", 165 pounds, and Drye stands 6'2", 225 pounds.

Off the court, Reggie Moses plans to score big when his basketball career ends at Johnson C. Smith.

Moses Tops As Free Throw Shooter

By Russell Clark
Post Staff Writer

When entering the Jack Brayboy Gym at Johnson C. Smith recently, one could sense that the Bulls are shifting into high gear with the C.I.A.A. near. The sound of sneakers slicing the stained wood floor, thundering slam dunks, and coaches and players screaming instructions. It seemed to be a routine practice except Reggie Moses was wearing a blue jersey instead a gold one.

Moses, a 6'3 senior is being replaced in the starting line-up by 5'10 Ricky McCormick of Fairmount. "Reggie plays better off the bench," says Coach Bob Moore. "He lifts our offense and he is one of our leaders on the team. Ricky is built low to the ground and he's a good ball handler."

"I'm adjusting well and it hasn't bothered my game because I'm getting to play more," replies Moses who has been an alternate starter since his sophomore year. "My role is a shooting guard or wing and Ricky is the ballhandler. I don't mind the change as long as I get to play and we are winning."

Majoring in Early Childhood with a 2.6 grade point average, Moses is also the best free throw shooter for the Bulls this season at 94 percent while shooting 56 percent from the field. His best game was against Virginia State in the 1985 C.I.A.A. Tournament when he pumped in 21 points while gathering six rebounds. "It was definitely the highlight of my career because it helped us to advance to the quarterfinals where we lost to Norfolk State. This year we plan to win it and I hope to make the all-tournament team," projects Moses averaging 11 points this season.

A 1983 graduate of West Charlotte High School, he played for Charles McCollough, and averaged 17 points with five rebounds. He was named All-Conference and All Conference in his senior year. In his high school career, he went up against both Tony White who is blossoming at Tennessee and Mark Maye of UNC-Chapel Hill.

Although he has one more year of eligibility left, Moses says he want be back on the court next year. "Right now, I'm trying to get myself together for life after basketball. When I get my degree in 1988, I want to own my own sporting good store and also teach kids. I like to watch them grow and be a role model," enlightens Moses in his Carter Hall dorm room.

Many talented young basketball players want get to play for the college of their choice because of the new NCAA Proposition 48 rule. "To me it's hurting sports because people want get to see quality basketball. Soon or later, players are going to get someone smart to take the SAT for them," remarks Moses flipping through a textbook.

While at Coulwood Junior High where he played for George Wilkinson, he averaged 14 points and earned the nickname "Silky" for his smooth playing style. Prior to this time, he developed his game playing in the Charlotte Park and Recreation Leagues. "I started playing organized basketball at the West Charlotte Neighborhood Center when I was in the first grade. "I always wanted to play for West Charlotte when I was young because I grew up watching Malcolm Pharr who is my guard brother. My favorite all time player was David Thompson because of his jumping ability."

Based on the requirements it takes to make a NBA team, size, speed, and quickness, basketball players are said to be some of the best athletes in the world. But many people don't know that most people don't know that some of them are not guaranteed. A player may get a five year contract with a guarantee of two years. According to an article by Norman Riley in the CRISIS Magazine, the long term effects of basketball practices have not been determined, but players do sacrifice their future personal health.

Sure there are some advantages of being a professional player-lucrative endorsements, commercials and glamour but there are pitfalls-injuries that deform your life, drugs and alcohol.

"I would love to get a chance to play in the NBA, CBA, or other international leagues, but there is no guarantee that I will and my chances are slim," voices Moses.

Born to T.A. and Ina Moses of Charlotte, he has an older sister, Octavia Lee, 26, and a older brother Wayne Moses, 30. The Moses attend the Statesville Avenue Baptist Church.

When asked what he likes most about the sport he answers "the different moves and the creativity of players make basketball fun. I get excited on game days because by playing in the game, I get to showcase what I've learned in practice and while growing"

McDonald's "Double Super Bowl Special"

Winston-Salem - McDonald's recently announced a one-day promotion that's guaranteed to have Super Bowl viewers shouting "DEFENSE!"

Called the Double Super Bowl Special, participating McDonald's restaurants in North and South Carolina will be selling a double cheeseburger and a double sized order of french fries for double the total score of the 1987 Super Bowl, to be played this Sunday, January 25.

That is, McDonald's will add the points scored by the New York Giants to those scored by the Denver Broncos, double the total, and sell the double cheeseburger and double sized fries combination for the result. Customers will be able to take advantage of the deal only from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Monday, January 26.

What if the final score is Giants 3, Broncos 0? "Then we'll be selling double cheeseburgers and double fries for six cents!" says Bill Hagerman, regional manager of McDonald's Corporation. "As long as fans understand that the offer is only good from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Monday, January 26 (the day after the Super Bowl), and that there will be a limit of two combinations per order - well, we'll hold up our end of the bargain no matter what the score."

The Double Super Bowl Special is good only at participating McDonald's restaurants in North and South Carolina.

McDonald's is the world's largest food service organization, serving 19 million people a day in more than 9,000 restaurants in 43 counties.

LADY BULL OF THE WEEK

Sandra McCracken

Brunswick High School team. McCracken scored 22 points and pulled down 10 rebounds as the Bulls won, 70-64, at North Carolina Central.

Three days later, she hit 19 and had six assists as the Lady Bulls rebounded from a 25-15 halftime deficit and won, 48-47.

Sandra McCracken is a senior point guard from Southport, N.C.

McCracken is the heart of the Lady Golden Bulls. She was the top defensive player of her South

Two players-Delaware State defensive back Joe Burton and North Carolina A&T noseguard Ernest Riddick-represented the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference on the first team. Several other MEAC players also received honorable mention honors.
