

Let Your "Do" Be Carefree

Your shoes are by Amalfi, the tailored suit you're wearing is a design of Pierre Cardin. There's not a run to be found in your textured fashion pantyhose, but your hair is going nowhere.

Don't even think you can swing into spring and you haven't done a thing with that hair of yours. A good hairstyle is just as important as the clothes you will be wearing.

For working women who have to juggle a career and a family, there's no time for a hairdo that requires much fuss. Carefree, yet flattering is the look to achieve.

For natural curly and curly permed hair of a longer length, a textured topknot works well at the office and add a hair adornment for after hours and you've created a hairstyle that slips into the nightlife with ease.

If your hair is short but still has that natural curly or curly permed look, just crop it close to the head and brush it back. What could be more carefree than that?

It may have looked good on Joan Crawford, but black women are discovering that the high rolled crown is perfect for relaxed hair. And if your hair is long enough flip the ends and you've created a style with loads of appeal.

And who said the ponytail is just for kids? This spring it's making a strong comeback in the office.

For those of you with shoulder-length hair, remove the pins and let it flow during working hours by styling it into a soft pageboy.

If a more sophisticated look is what you seek, see if the asymmetrical roll placed high on the crown will suit your needs.

Keep that natural look, by sculpting your "do" in a perfected, boxed look. It's only for those who truly dare to set their own fashion trends and keep their individualism intact.

Is conservatism your nature? Then opt for a cheek-length bob with fringed bangs. Wherever you go, people will know that you mean business.
