

Danny Nucci (center) plays a teen-age boy apparently infected with AIDS, Gladys Knight (left) plays an immunologist who tries to help him, and Dee Wallace Stone and Stephen Macht play his mother and father, in "An Enemy Among Us," a CBS Special Presentation, to be broadcast Tuesday, July 21, at 8 p.m. on WBTV, Channel 3.

"The Aids Connection: An All Night Dialogue"

WBTV, Channel 3 will air "The AIDS Connection: An All-Night Dialogue," beginning at 11:30 PM on Friday night, July 24, and continuing til 4:30 AM Saturday morning, July 25.

AIDS is the world's fastest growing incurable disease, and everyone is a potential AIDS victim. The live, 5-hour national program will focus on the impact of AIDS on America's 18-34 year-olds, the age group most vulnerable to this deadly disease which President Reagan has described as "public enemy number one." It will link local television stations nationwide to jointly examine the urgent, life-or-death issues surrounding acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS).

Hosted by award-winning journalists John Hambrick of WTVJ in Miami and Renee-Pouissant of WJLA in Washington, "The AIDS Connection" will use the latest in satellite technology to bring numerous live audiences face-to-face with doctors, AIDS patients, prostitutes, hemophiliacs, marriage counselors and others for an uncensored question-and answer marathon.

During the week leading up to the all-night telecast, WBTV News will present a five-part series on AIDS, beginning Monday, July 20th on the 6 O'Clock News, and continuing during that time daily through Friday, July 24th. WBTV News reporters Chris Clackum, Lisa Keyes, Drew Levinson, Cliff Oliver and Dr. Kevin Soden will look at AIDS through the stages of a terminal disease, including denial, anger, resignation and hope.

Also throughout the week, "TOP O' The Day" will air features on AIDS that focus on pain relief, support groups, home care, problems in the military, and how health departments trace carriers.

And, on Tuesday, July 21st at 8:00 PM, a CBS Special Presentation entitled "An Enemy Among Us," will deal with how a teen-ager and his family cope with AIDS. Starring are Dee Wallace Stone, Danny Nucci and Gladys Knight.
