

How To Resolve Marital Conflicts

LIFESTYLES/ PAGE 7A

Charlotte To Get More Kool Moe Dee

ENTERTAINMENT/PAGE 1B

Black Olympians Honored At Museum

The Charlotte Post

Vol. 14, No. 12

THE AWARD-WINNING "VOICE OF THE BLACK COMMUNITY"

50 Cents

Minority Affairs Task Force OK'd 5-1

Post Staff Writer

Mecklenburg County Monday came a step closer to resurrecting its Minority Affairs Office nearly one year after it was all but dead.

Commissioners voted 5-1 to appoint a 15-member task force to study the feasibiltiy of bring-ing back the office, which was merged with the Community Relations department last year. Jerry Blackmon, a Republican, cast the only dissenting vote while Democrat Bob Walton, the only black commissioner, voted

In the past, Minority Affairs advocated services and projects for blacks in addition to serving as an information network.

Walton said the vote for a task $40,000 for a minority affairs program is the first step in bringing the office back.

"I'm very pleased that during budget time the commissioners saw fit to set aside money to establish a Minority Affairs Office if that's what they see fit to do," he said.

The commissioners will most likely name the study panel next month, Walton said. Six com-

Sen. Helms Backs Black Judge

WASHINGTON (AP) --- Sen. Jesse Helms says prompt action is needed to allow U.S. District Judge Richard C. Erwin of Winston-Salem to become the first black chief district judge in North Carolina.

"I would like to see him set that precedent," Helms told The News and Observer of Raleigh on Tuesday. But Democrats say Er-win could become chief judge of the state's middle district without the Senate's action. A key Judiciary Committee aide said the Senate would not speed up its normal procedures in order to accommodate Helms.

Erwin would become chief judge if the Senate confirms N. Carlton "Woody" Tilley of Greensboro for a federal judge-ship, clearing the way for Chief Judge Hiram Ward to go on senior status," a form of semiretirement.

But Helms contends the action must be taken quickly.

Helms also accused Senate Democrats of stalling numerous Republican judicial nomina-tions in hopes of killing them if Democrats win the White House in November. Because Republicans hold the presidency, they make nominations for federal judgeships; Helms controls all nominations from North Carolina because he is the state's only Republican senator.

Particularly vexing to Helms is the case of Gastonia lawyer Richard Voorhees, who needs only a Senate floor vote to achieve his two-year battle to become a U.S. district judge in the state's western district.

Helms has said that Democratic Sen. Terry Sanford of Dur-ham and other Democrats are blocking final action on Voorhees. "I don't see any hopes of seeing Voorhees confirmed unless they have a change of heart," he said.

Sanford said several senators objected to a final vote on Voorhees, but he declined to identify Helms has said Sanford's hold on the Voorhees nomination was in response to Helms' blocking of a wilderness bill for the Great Smoky Mountains Na-tional Park. But Helms said Tuesday the wilderness disagreement was "just one excuse that's being used" to block Voorhees' confirmation.

missioners will name two members to the task force while chairman Carla DuPuy will would appoint to the panel, but would likely choose from people who express an interest in serving.

"I'm availing myself to those persons who may be interested," he said, adding that he would recommend candidates if other commissioners ask him to do

The Republican-dominated board probably didn't realize the importance of a Minority Affairs Office when the program was dismantled, Walton said. Blacks accused the commission of being insensitive and even racist when the office was trimmed from the county's bud-

"In my mind, the commissioners did not have the full understanding of what the Minority Affairs Office was about," he local groups and individuals, however, contributed to the vote for a task force. Walton said black support for the office and his win in the Democratic primary in May helped in his campaign to bring it back.

"I look at it as my job," he said.
"Regardless of who I sit with, it is my job to make sure the interests of the black community are

A Minority Affairs program, Walton said, is important to help blacks gain access to county politics and business. He compared the situation to the plight of women before the Womens Commission was established in 1974 behind the leadership of former commissioner Liz Hair.

"Fourteen years hence, we have a woman mayor, a woman who's chairman of the county com-missioners and we recently had do the same thing." Contrary to speculation, Walton said the task force vote was not linked to his position to deny county money to Planned Parenthood. After 10 years of supporting the agency, Walton voted in June against funding. "There was no deal pulled regarding the Minority Affairs Of-a woman chairman of the school board," Walton said. "We need a Minority Affairs Office to fice and Planned Parenthood," he said.

Citing duplication of services, the commisssioners merged Minority Affairs with Community Relations. But when it didn't work, Walton said, separate agencies became a possibility.
"The fact that it didn't work out may have helped them say 'maybe we need to bring that back," he said.

Momentum Building To Eliminate Runoff Elections

Post Staff Writer

When proponents of second primaries dragged their feet about relaxing the choke hold runoffs have on black candidates, civil rights activists like Kelly Alexander were stymied. Now Alexander, a former candidate for register of deeds feels that second primaries will soon be a thing of the past, and he won't settle for anything less than their total elimination.

The time to compromise was last year when I was willing to compromise," he said. "But I'm not in the compromising mood

The Mecklenburg County board of elections last week denied Alexander's appeal to stay the May canvass certifying Judy Gibson's win over Alexander in the Democratic runoff. The board, however, will offer a written opinion on Alexander's appeal and will submit it to the N.C. board of elections later this Paul Allen, Mecklenburg's chief registrar, said the board declared Gibson the winner based on the way current law is written.

"The way the election laws are written and interpreted," said. "There are a lot of different variables.'

The board could possibly present its findings on the appeal to the state board as early as next week at meetings in Greensboro, Allen said.

"You never know what the state board is going to do," Allen cautioned about its reviewing process. "If the board turns down the appeal, the next option would be federal court."

Alexander, state president of the NAACP, said that although

See RUNOFFS' On Page 2A

This 1985 collage by Bearden entitled BEFORE DAWN is the model for Charlotte Public Library mural.

Romare Bearden Mural Is Picked For Charlotte's Main Library

The Charlotte/Mecklenburg Art Commission and the Board of Trustees of the Public Library of Charlotte and Mecklenburg County have announced their selection of a Romare Bearden mural for the 1 percent art in public places project for the new Main Library.

The 9 foot high by 13-1/2 foot wide mural, which will be fabricated from glass mosaic tiles, will be placed on the first floor of the library, adjacent to the main entrance/lobby area. the maquette (model) for the mural is a 1985 collage by Mr. Bearden entitled Before Dawn. This work was selected from a group of available works as an excellent example of the artist's Mecklen-County series. The collage depicts a family's early morning activities as they greet the new day; the rising sun shines through the doorway. Romare Bearden, who died earlier this year, was born in Charlotte in 1911 and spent much of his childhood here. Although he went on to international acclaim and lived primar ily in New York, he was fond of ving that in his heart he never left Mecklenburg. At the time of his death, he was generally regarded as the master living col-

The $125,000 cost of the project was made possible by the one percent of the construction budget set aside under the City/ County art in public places ordi-nance, and by a major gift from The Charlotte Observer. This marks the first time since the inception of the 1 percent program that there has been such public/private cooperation to meet a budget and see a project realized. In addition, other private funds are being raised by a committee coordinated by Elizabeth Randolph, Library Trustee, and Jeanne Brayboy, member of the Arts Commission, to provide lighting and printed material about the mural.

The mural will be scaled from the original collage and made by the Crovatto Mosaic Company of Italy. It is expected that it will be installed in the Library near the end of February, 1989.

The Mecklenburg Board of County Commissioners unanimously approved the Bearden mural in March, 1988. The mural was then negotiated with Mrs. Bearden and the artist's estate, by Jeraldd Melberg Gallery, Inc., Bearden's local representative.

The collage Before Dawn, will be on view the remainder of August in the lobby of the Charlotte Observer building.

N.C. Colleges Get More Minority Applications

Alexander

RALEIGH (AP) --- North Carolina colleges are receiving more applications from minorities. partly because of more aggressive marketing, better school counseling and a growing crop of students whose parents went to "The reasons why minorities are going to college in increasing numbers are the same as why other students are going to college in increasing numbers: the emphasis in our society is on getting education," said John J. Schmidt, coordinator of school counseling for the state Department of Public Instruction.

But the higher numbers do not reflect all good news. Since federal financial aid has shrunk in the Reagan years, fewer poor black students might be attending four-year colleges, Patricia Smith, legislative analyst for the American Council on Education in Washington, told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

The percentage of poor students has dropped at at least one of North Carolina's historically black universities.

At N.C. Central University, 83 percent of the students received gram will soon become involved financial aid in 1983. Three years later, only 55 percent got aid, a trend that appears to be continuing. NCCU officials at-tribute the decrease to a growing number of middle-class students at the school.

Officials at predominantly black schools in North Carolina say they're getting more applicatons this year.

"The message is out there: When you go to college it increases your ability to participate in the American way," said Nathan Simms, vice president for stu-dent services for the University of North Carolina system.

"And many of those who aspire to that goal have prepared themselves well, already meeting or beating stricter UNC system ad-missions standards scheduled to go into effect in 1990," Simms

See MINORITY On Page 2A

Child Care Ctr. To Open In Work Place

Carla DuPuy, Chairman of the Board of Mecklenburg County Commissioners, and Charlotte Mayor Pro Tem Al Rousso will participate in the ribbon cutting ceremonies at the grand opening of the University Child Development Center on August 25, 12

The center, a new child care concept, is located in the work place at 8303 University Executive Park off Hwy 29, adjacent to University Place. This child development center is the first of its kind in this area, and is in direct reponse to the Corporate Champion Task Force Report which called for quality child development centers close to where people work.

CPCC Threatens To Close West Charlotte Location

By LORA VANDERHALL Post Staff Writer

Central Pleamont Community College is threatening to close the West Charlotte High School location due to lack of enroll-

The site at West Charlotte High has been there for the past 20 years and if the program is to be continued much more participation is needed. Brenda ipation is needed. Brenda Froneberger, site administrator, says there are several factors which may be contributing to the lack of enrollment.

Competition could be one of the reasons for the lack of par-ticipation. The Double Oaks site is open all day and they offer the same type of courses. In addition to that, there are churches and and other organizations with similar type pro-

"But there is still a need for this type program in our community." said Froneberger. There is also an amount of apathy associated with the lack of enrollment. This is an example of how some black communities refuse to use the resources available to them, despite their personal need for the services. Froneberger has been working very hard to generate interest in the program. She has written to thirty churches and passed out flyers in various neighborhoods. Gethsemane Enrichment Proin the effort to save the West Charlotte site. The tutorial program at Gethsemane will offer scholarships for parents who are interested in taking classes at West Charlotte. Transporta-

Froneberger

See CPCC On Page 2A

Inside This Week

Editorials.....Pg. 4A The westside's needs

Lifestyles......Pg. 7A Soprano to give recital at St. John Baptist.....11A

Church News.....Pg. 9A Youth workshop at St. Luke Baptist.

Entertainment.....Pg. 1B Skip Murphy vies for nat'l title.

Sports......Pg. 7B Giants upset Jets in Triple-County play.

Classifieds......Pg. 12B The Alliance.....Sec. C

Subscribe to the Charlotte Post, call 376-0496