

Garner And The Split-Ticket

 In his campaign for auditor, Garner attacked Renfrow's record of minority hirings, charging that until recently, Renfrow had few blacks working for his office.
 "The are no black officials in professional and managerial areas in the auditor's office now," Garner said. "My administration will be an administration of inclusion with blacks and whites working together."
 Garner also said his staff would have better relationships with state agencies.
 Mr. Renfrow has an adversarial relationship with state agen-

cles," he said.
 A lawyer with an undergraduate degree from N.C. A&T, Garner touts his professional resume. He represented Akzo America of Asheville on equal employment matters and was the first black pilot to fly with the North Carolina National Guard.
 Regardless of party affiliation, Garner said his message and experience should win votes next month.
 "I'm not saying vote for me because I'm black, but because I'm qualified," he said.

People On The Move

Dr. Phoenix Is Asst. V.C.

Dr. David Phoenix, an assistant professor of health care management at Appalachian State University, has been named assistant to the vice chancellor for academic affairs for recruiting minority faculty. Phoenix will recruit black and female faculty members part-time while continuing to teach.
 "The university has set a goal that we would like to increase our minority presence in regards to faculty by at least five a year," he said. "Appalachian is willing to provide opportunities and we want blacks and women to be here."
 Phoenix said the university has one tenured black faculty member, one black faculty member in a tenure track and one black lecturer.
 Phoenix plans to publish notices that positions in all academic areas are available for blacks and women and collect resumes to build a candidate pool.
 An Ohio native, Phoenix received a bachelor's degree in government from Miami University of Ohio, a master's in social administration from Case Western Reserve University and a doctorate in health policy and administration from UNC-Chapel Hill. He joined the Appalachian faculty in 1984.

Chasten Heads Consumer Div.

Insurance Commissioner Jim Long recently announced that Samuel N. Chasten will become interim deputy commissioner of the Insurance Department's consumer affairs division.
 He has served in the department since 1976 as a complaint analyst and most recently as supervisor in the property and casualty section of the consumer division.
 Chasten is a graduate of the Shaw University School of Business and continued his study of accounting at N.C. State University. A Raleigh resident, he is a native of Duplin County.
 "We are fortunate that individuals like Sam Chasten are able to pick up the reins and move the department forward in this important area of service," Long said in making the appointment public.

Dr. Monroe Is Educ. Advisor

Dr. Lee Monroe works as the senior education advisor to Governor James G. Martin, coordinating educational policy and activities of other advisors responsible for education in North Carolina. Monroe also advises the governor on matters concerning higher education.
 Before joining the Martin administration, Monroe served as executive vice president at Shaw University in Raleigh. He has held jobs as senior research associate at the National Institute of Education and special assistant to the assistant secretary for management in the U.S. Department of Education.
 Monroe earned a degree in elementary education at Shaw University in 1965 and later obtained a master's degree in guidance counseling and industrial psychology at the University of Cincinnati. He received a doctorate in education administration from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg, Va. A native of Wilmington, Monroe has two sons.

Gantt To Work At WBTV

 again and be close to my family.
 "But I don't have any illusions about working in the Charlotte market," Miss Gantt said in a telephone interview.
 She expressed the opinion that working in Charlotte would be a more challenging prospect than her present assignment.
 "I've learned a lot here at WBTV, things that just never occurred to me before. I had to learn a lot about the technical aspects of videography."
 "You have to know how to get the pictures to go with a particular story."
 Miss Gantt says that she has used her experience in Florence to sharpen herself as a reporter.
 When asked about her most memorable moment thus far as a reporter, Gantt recalled a recent story. "There was a little boy who fell into an icee over pond and was believed to be clinically dead."
 "But he was rushed to Charleston and was revived there. Later he completely recovered. The story stands out because so many people became involved in that youngster's recovery.

 "There was the rescue crew, the ambulance crew and of course the hospital staff. I mean there was a lot more to that incident than would have been the case ordinarily."
 Miss Gantt was moved by the dedication of all involved. "I just reported the story, but I became very involved with it and the follow-up," said Gantt.
 Miss Gantt also talked about how she has improved her interview skills. "I've learned how to ask the right questions and get the story's essence."
 "It's important to ask open-ended questions that people can converse about, rather than just give yes and no responses."
 Miss Gantt also said that she had a lot of work to do between now and the end of the month.
 "I've got to find myself an apartment."

Autrey Speaks On The Issues

 reducing "conflicting messages" to state and federal bodies regarding issues ranging from housing to roads.
 "We've got to have one government and one set of priorities," he said.
 Although consolidation hasn't been embraced in Mecklenburg, Autrey said the time may be right for a merger.

Local police should be allowed to intervene in domestic disputes and make warrantless arrests of abusive spouses.
 "It's getting so that women are safer in the streets of Charlotte than they are at home," he said.

Defining substance abuse as a "crisis that threatens to tear apart the fabric that holds us together," Autrey said he will propose a county-wide "drug commission" to develop a "war plan" on drugs, including drug abuse programs.

"We seem to be sending conflicting messages to those we're communicating with. People are looking for us to set our priorities," he said.

Autrey called for stepped up cooperation within the county to curb drug abuse and domestic violence, with more emphasis on prevention and counseling.
