Indian/U.S. Children's Art On Display At UNC C

"From My Land to Your Land: Children's Art from India and America," is currently on display in the Dalton Gallery of UNC Charlotte's Atkins Library.

The exhibit, featuring the artwork of children ages 5-14 from Madras, India; Charlotte and Salisbury, is the result of a seven-week, Fulbright-sponsored Faculty Development Seminar conducted by UNCC religious studies professor Dan White in India last summer.

The exhibit includes 42 pieces from India and 43 pieces from Charlotte and Salisbury. Many of the pieces, which are primarily drawings, are related to the cross-cultural theme and express the student's views of their respective countries.

Previously shown in Salisbury, the exhibit will be on display at UNCC through June 30. Following a showing at country Day in September, the artwork will return to Madras. The teachers plan to continue the exchange as a two-year pilot program.

The Dalton Gallery is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. For more information, call 547-2449 during business hours.

A record holder for the State Championship, Carlton was captain of both Cross Country and Track teams at West Charlotte '88-'89. He was all Tri-County in track.

Carlton will attend UNC- Chapel Hill this fall. He will major in biology with plans of becoming a doctor.

The Success Of Teen Job Exchange

A total of 3800 calls were processed during the five-day "Teen Job Exchange" at the WSOC-TV, channel 9 studios. Over 200 companies participated by offering jobs to teens.

Realizing the problem of matching summer jobs with employers, Channel 9 set up a phone bank to take incoming calls from teens looking for summer employment and employers with job opportunities for teenagers.

Teenagers ages 16 to 20 and employers looking for summer help dialed toll free numbers in North and South Carolina. There was no charge for this service.

Sponsored by Channel 9, volunteers were recruited by The Charlotte Mecklenburg Urban League, Inc. Matching the teens to employers will be The City of Charlotte Employment and Training Department.

"Channel 9 and the 'Teen Job Exchange' gave teenagers the opportunity to apply for work without leaving home. Adults answering the phones were able to give teens advice, answer questions about working and encourage them in their first job search," said Jeanne Bohn, Channel 9's director of community affairs.

"WSOC-TV has become vitally concerned about the numbers of young children who take responsibility for their brothers and sisters and sometimes neighbors' children during the summer months.

"Some children may assume these responsibilities without adequate preparation," explained Jeanne Bohn, director of public affairs at Channel 9. "A full day of training will provide teens with the information and safety skills they need."
