

It's Lethal: Glover And Gibson Paired In Movie Sequel

The dynamic team of L.A. detectives Martin Riggs (MEL GIBSON) and Roger Murtaugh (DANNY GLOVER) are back in "Lethal Weapon 2," the action-packed and eagerly awaited film that continues the adventures of Warner Bros.' 1987 smash hit "Lethal Weapon."

In the exciting, all-new "Lethal Weapon 2," Riggs and Murtaugh are assigned to protect a federal witness from a fearsome crime syndicate. The witness' information leads Riggs and Murtaugh directly to the head of the syndicate, who turns out to be a racist South African diplomat to the United States named Arjen Rudd. Unfortunately for the police, Rudd is protected by diplomatic immunity, and arresting him seems impossible.

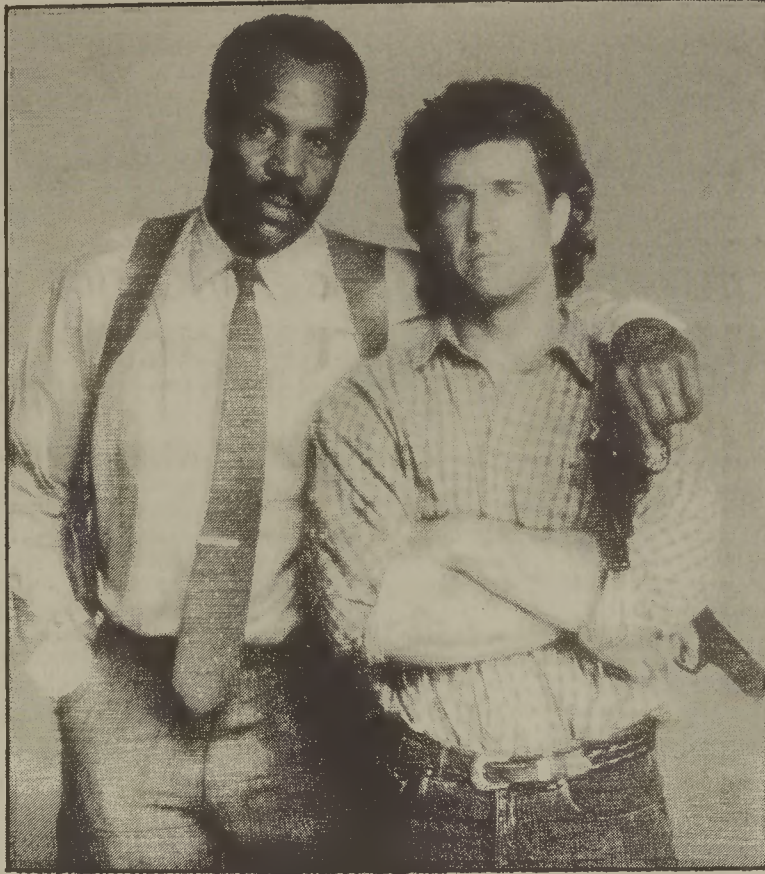

Unfortunately for Mr. Rudd, "impossible" is a word that Riggs and Murtaugh refuse to understand!

Riggs, a constantly on-edge "lethal weapon" to his enemies, is nevertheless a warm surrogate member of partner Roger Murtaugh's family—wife Trish (DARLENE LOVE), their older daughter Rianne (TRACI WOLFE) and two younger children, Nick (DAMON HINES) and Carrie (EBONIE SMITH). The Murtaugh home is a much-needed refuge for both men from the non-stop stress of their work. The actors who portray Roger and his family, all returning from "Lethal Weapon," developed a closeness that befits an on-screen unit.

DANNY GLOVER has rapidly ascended the scale of success to become one of America's most exciting leading men. Glover has impressed audiences as Moze, the sharecropper who helps to save Sally Field's farm in "Places in the Heart"; the crooked cop out to kill fellow officer Harrison Ford in "Witness"; the heroic cowboy in "Silverado"; and "Mister" in Steven Spielberg's film version of Alice Walker's "The Color Purple."

For his title role of the great South African freedom fighter in HBO's "Mandela," Glover won both the ACE and NAACP Image Awards. More recently, he has starred in the feature "BAT-21" with Gene Hackman, and in the PBS-TV production of Lorraine Hansberry's "A Raisin in the Sun." He was also back in the saddle again for the hugely popular CBS mini-series "Lonesome Dove." Glover also won an NAACP Image Award for his performance as Roger Murtaugh in "Lethal Weapon."
