SPORTS PRO/CON

We Want A Winner!
 David Remer

Every year the same question is asked... who is the national champion of College Football? And every year, 2, 3, or 4 teams claim the crown for themselves.

Can you blame them? They played hard, had good seasons, there's no obvious champion.

What if both teams lose and the third ranked team wins? Too many possibilities without a logical conclusion.

Some teams aren't allowed to win the championship. They don't ever play the right teams or come from the same conference. I speak for all those who love college football when I say it's time for a change.

Imagine it's the end of the 1990 season. Sixteen teams are chosen from the masses to compete in the play-offs. After three rounds, the two surviving teams fight it out for the undisputed national championship.

Think of how proud that school would be to win
 the first real college title.

And think of how exciting it would be to watch each great match-up, one after another. No more arguments. No more debates. No subjective ranking based on the whims of a few.

I, for one, will be happy the first time a team takes on all comers and earns the championship by dominating the best in college football.

Of course I also won't mind when some team destined to be ranked 15th for eternity plays like demons and takes the crown.

No doubts.
 No questions.
 No problems.

Where do YOU stand? We want to know.

Save The Bowls!
 Jordan Rubin

Is ANYTHING sacred? No Rose Bowl on January 1st? No gaudy Orange Bowl Halftime show? Not even the golden tradition of the Liberty Bowl to thrill Americans.

It's unfortunate that some individuals feel that for nothing more than the sake of change, the traditional arrangement of College Football's bowl games should be raped, and stripped from America's present... and future.

They'd devise a cold, rigid structure of a 16 team play-off system.

At first glance, this may please the green, superficial sports fan. But no purist in any sense of the word could be thrilled at this notion.

For good reason.

First: Criteria. What 16 teams are allowed to compete? Do we use A.P.'s top 16? U.P.I.'s top 16?
 Or even CNN/USA Today's?

Second: In order to dwindle a field of 16 down to a national champion, four weeks have to be added.
 That may sound great at first, but remember, these are students first, and football players second.

Third: Several teams, such as Colorado, Wyoming, and UTEP, are seldom seen on national TV, but usually receive bowl bids. Thus a play-off system would take money away from their athletic departments, and cripple recruiting efforts.

Finally, is not finding a true champion so bad? A certain mystique of the game is captured. It creates healthy rivalries between teams, schools and conferences.

With that I say keep our beloved bowl games intact. Help maintain one of our nation's greatest sporting traditions. SAVE THE BOWLS!
