the movement to increase the representation of black women in women's studies.

"In the early days of women's studies, it was a monographic study," Jones said. "It was defined by whites, educated, middle income women. It left a lot to be desired."

Jones authored "Jane Edna Hunter: A Case Study of Black Leadership," and several other works that highlight the works of African American women.

"Writing, speaking, exploring these are my gift," she said. "I give back by teaching another generation of young people."

She credits her success to her parents who in spite of all the obstacles against them never taught that race was a hindrance.

"My parents neglected an important part of my education" she said. "They never taught me that I couldn't do it because of my gender or race. There were no boundaries."

'Phantom of The Opera' is a must-see the mirror, the Phantom's image appeared giving an excellent special effects. Then the dynamic scene transitions of the Phantom taking Christine to his underground labyrinth was worth the price of the ticket.

The singing, the acting, and especially the special effects made this production a must see.

You will laugh, you will cry, you will be mesmerized with the singing. You will be entertained.

"The Phantom of the Opera" will be playing for the next 8 weeks at the Belk's Theater in the Blumenthal Performing Arts Center. Performances are at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday with matinees at 2 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. You can get tickets by calling (704) 333-prophetic role to help build an inclusive society."

McConnell took exception to the bishop's remarks.

"He engages in the practice of stereotyping supporters of the flag, and stereotyping to me is a manifestation of narrow-mindedness and being unable to appreciate people's differences," McConnell told the newspaper.

"Just because somebody supports the flying of the Confederate battle flag does not make them a racist."
