NO PLEASURE WITHOUT LABOR.

Some polemics argue that but for the disobedience of our first parents, we should now be living in a play-day instead of a work-day world. Yet labor seems so essential to the happiness of the human family as at present constituted, that one can scarcely conceive of true enjoyment without it. We don't believe that Adam was ever an idle man, or Eve an indolent woman.

When we are past work, the remembrance of our labors, if they have been honorable and useful, is the chief solace of our retirement.
