THE DEATH SCENE OF THE DISTINGUISHED MISSIONARY, G. D. BOARDMAN.

We find in the memoirs of George D. Boardman, by Rev. Alonzo King, the following touching letter from his wife who was afterword the second Mrs. Judson, describing the last scenes in the loss of that truly great man.

Tavoy, March 7, 1831.

My Beloved Parents,

With a heart glowing with joy, and at the same time rent with anguish unutterable, I take my pen to address you. You too will rejoice when you hear what God has wrought through the instrumentality of your beloved son. Yes, you will bless God that you were enabled to devote him to his blessed service among the heathen, when I felt you that within the last two months fifty-seven have been baptized, all Karens, excepting one, a little boy of the school and son of the native governor. Twenty-three were baptized in this city by Mung Ing, and thirty-four in their native wilderness by Mr. Mason.

Mr. Mason arrived Jan. 23d, and on the 31st, he, with Mr. Boardman, myself and George, set out on a long-promised tour among the Karens. Mr. Boardman was very feeble, but we hoped the change of air and scenery would be beneficial. A company of Karens had come to convey us out, Mr. Boardman on his bed, and me in a chair.

We reached the place on the third day, and found they had erected a bamboo chapel on a beautiful stream at the base of a range of mountains. The place was central, and many one hundred persons had assembled, more than half of them applicants for baptism. O it was a sight calculated to call forth the finest joy of which human nature is susceptible, and made me for a moment, forget my bitter griefs—a sight far surpassing all I had ever anticipated, even in my most sanguine hours. The Karens cooked, ate and slept on the ground, by the river side, with no other shelter than the trees of the forest. Three years ago they were sunk in the lowest depths of ignorance and superstition. Now the glad tidings of mercy had reached them, and they were willing to live in the open air, away from their homes, for the sake of enjoying the privileges of the Gospel.

My dear husband had borne the journey better than we had feared, though he suffered from exhaustion, and pain in his side, which, however, was much relieved by a little attention. His spirits were unusually good, and we fondly hoped that a few days' rest, once in that delightful airy spot, surrounded by his loved Karens, would recruit and invigorate his weakened frame. But I soon perceived he was failing, and tenderly urged his return to town, where he could enjoy the quietness of home, and the benefit of medical advice. But he repelled the thought at once, saying he confidently expected improvement from the change, and that the disappointment would be worse for him than staying. And even, added he, should my poor unprofitable life be somewhat shortened by staying, ought I, on that account merely, to leave this interesting field? Should I not rather stay and assist in gathering in the scattered lambs of the fold? You know, Sarah, that coming on a foreign mission involves the probability of a shorter life, than staying in one's native country. And yet obedience to our Lord, and compassion for the perishing heathen, induced us to make this sacrifice. And have we ever repented that we came? No; I trust we can both say that we bless God that he has brought us to Burmah, that he directed our footsteps to Tavoy, and even that he has led us out here now. You already know, my love, he continued, with a look of tenderness never to be forgotten, that I cannot live long. I must sink under this disease; and should we go home now, the all important business which I brought us out must be given up, and I might linger out a few days of suffering, stung by the reflection, that I had preferred a few idle days, to my Master's service. Don't therefore ask me to go, till these poor Karens have been baptized. I saw he was right, but my feelings revolted. Nothing seemed so valuable as his life, and I felt that I would make any sacrifice to prolong it, though it were but for one hour. Still a desire to gratify him, if no higher motive, made me silent, though my heart ached to see him so ill in such a wretched place, deprived of many of the comforts of life, to say nothing of the inducements desirable in sickness.

The chapel was large, but open on all sides, excepting a small place built up for Mr. Mason, and a room about five feet wide and ten feet long, for the accommodation of Mr. Boardman and myself with our little boy. The roof was so low that I could not stand upright; and it was but poorly enclosed, so that we were exposed to the burning rays of the sun by day, and to the cold winds and damp fog by night. But his mind was happy, and he would often say, "I feel as if I were in my native land, I may as well be at home with my happy Simon, Lord, how I love to see the servant depart in peace according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation. How many ministers have wished they might die in their pulpits, and would not dying in a spot like this be even more blessed than dying in a pulpit at home? I feel that it would.

Nor was it merely the pleasing state of things around him that filled his mind with comfort. He would sometimes dwell on the infinite compassion of God, and his own unworthiness, till his strength was quite exhausted; and though he told Mr. Mason that he had not the rapture which he had sometimes enjoyed, yet his mind was calm and peaceful; and it was plainly perceptible, that earthly passions had died away, and that he was enjoying sweet foretastes of that rest into which he was so soon to enter. He would often say to me, "My meditations are very sweet, though my mind seems as much weakened as my body. I have not had that liveliness of feeling which I have sometimes enjoyed, owing to my great weakness, but I shall soon be released from these shackles, and be where I can praise God continually, without weariness. My thoughts delight to dwell on these words, 'There is no night there.'"

"I felt that the time of separation was fast approaching, and said to him, 'My dear, I have one request to make; it is, that you would pray much for George during your few remaining days; I shall soon be left alone, almost the only one on earth to pray for him, and I have great confidence in your dying prayers.' He looked earnestly at the little boy, and said, 'I will try to pray for him, but I trust very many prayers will ascend for the dear child from our friends at home, who will be induced to supplicate the more earnestly for him, when they hear that he is left fatherless in a heathen land.'"

"On Wednesday, while looking in the glass he seemed at once to see symptoms of his approaching dissolution, and said without emotion, 'I have altered greatly—I am sinking in to the grave very fast—just on the verge.' Mr. Mason said to him, 'Is there nothing we can do for you? Had we not better call the physician? Or shall we try to remove you into town immediately?' After a few moments' deliberation, it was concluded to defer the baptism of the male applicants, and set out for home early the next morning. Nearly all the female candidates had been examined, and as it is difficult for them to come to town, it was thought best that Mr. Mason should baptize them in the evening. We knelt down, and Mr. Mason having prayed for a blessing on the decision, with sorrowful hearts we sat down to breakfast.

"While we were at the table, my beloved husband said, 'I shall soon be thrown away for this world; but I hope the Lord Jesus will take me up.' That merciful Being who is represented as passing by, and having compassion on the poor cast-out infant, will not suffer me to perish. O, I have no hope but in the wonderful, condescending, infinite mercy of God through his dear Son. I cast my poor perishing soul, loaded with sin as it is, upon his compassionate arms, assured that all will be for ever safe.' On seeing my tears, he said, 'Are you not reconciled to the will of God, my love?—When I told him I hoped I did not feel unrepentant, he continued, 'I have long ago, and many times, committed you and our little one into the hands of our covenant God. He is the husband of the widow and the father of the fatherless. Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive; and let thy widows trust in me, saith the Lord. He will be your stay and support when I am gone. The separation will be but short. O how happy I shall be to welcome you to heaven.' He then addressed Mr. Mason as follows, 'Brother, I am heartily rejoiced, and bless God that you have arrived, and especially am I gratified, that you are so much interested for the poor Karens. You will, I am assured, watch over them, and take care of them; and if some of them turn back, you will still care for them. As to my dear wife and child, I know you will do all in your power to make them comfortable. Mrs. B. will probably spend the ensuing rain in Tavoy. She will be happy with you and Mrs. Mason; that is, as happy as she can be in her state of loneliness. She will mourn for me, and a widow's state is desolate and sorrowful at best. But God will be infinitely better to her than I have ever been.' On the same day, he wished me to read some hymns on affliction, sickness, death, &c. I took Wesley's H. M. Book, the only one we had with us, and several, among others the one beginning, 'Ah! lovely appearance of death.'"

"On Wednesday evening thirty-four persons were baptized. Mr. Boardman was carried to the water side, though so weak that he could scarcely breathe without the continual use of the fan and the smelling-bottle. The joyful sight was almost too much for his feeble frame. When we reached the chapel, he said he should like to sit up and take tea with us. We placed his cot near the table, and having bolstered him up, we took tea together. He asked the blessing, and did it with his right hand upraised, and in a tone that struck me to the heart. It was the same tremulous, yet urgent, and I had almost said, unearthly voice, with which my god-grandfather used to pray. We now began to notice that brightening of the mental faculties, which I had heard spoken of in persons near their end.

REAL ESTATE AGENCY NORTH CAROLINA ADVERTISER. THE UNDERSIGNED HAVE ESTABLISHED in the city of Raleigh, an Agency for the purpose of buying and selling Real Estate in North Carolina. In connection therewith and as auxiliary thereto they will publish a double sheet, twice a week, four column weekly newspaper, wherein will be advertised, free of cost, all lands offered for sale through their agency, and which will be devoted to the dissemination of information concerning the agricultural, mineral, manufacturing and other resources of the State. By means of competent Agents in every county they will show the present advancement and special capabilities for future development of each. It will be found, on investigation, that no State in the Union can present such a combination of advantages as North Carolina. Situation midway between the colder regions of the North and the more tropical climes of the South, its land stretching from the sea coast to the mountains, yield beautiful returns of cotton, tobacco, rice, grain, fruits, pasturage, grapes and other products, while in its bosom lie rich mines of gold and iron, copper, lead, coal, and other minerals, its rivers afford water power sufficient for the most extensive factories, and in its forests are boundless supplies of naval stores, timber and material for tanning. Under the recent change in the system of labor it becomes the interest of proprietors to part with a portion of their real estate, and it is the object of this enterprise, through agencies in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and other chief cities to bring these resources of the State to the notice of men of energy and capital, to get together the seller and the buyer, and to aid, in starting North Carolina in a career of prosperity heretofore unknown. The ADVERTISER will be furnished free of charge to all customers and to others at the Dollar per annum. The first number will be issued by the first of July, or sooner, if the type and necessary material already ordered, can be procured from New York before that time. Those desirous to advertise in the first number will please communicate to the undersigned at once. Moderate commissions will be charged where sales are made. HECK, BATTLE & CO., Raleigh, N.
